Administration Indorses 20% Increase in Federal Wages

Senate Gets Plea to Hike Congressmen To $20,000

$10,000 Pay Boosts For Court Justices And Cabinet Sought In Revision Program

By Jerry Kluttz

Practicing what he preached to industry, President Truman has thrown the full support of his Administration behind a program of higher salaries for an estimated 1,160,000 Federal workers.

He would cover officials up and down the line from office boys to Cabinet members and from clerks to members of Congress and Federal judges.

The Administration program was unveiled yesterday before the Senate Civil Service Committee by Arthur S. Flemming, the GOP member of the Civil Service Commission. It provides:

1. That the salaries of most white-collar employes be raised 20 per cent.
2. That two new grades be added at the top of the Classification Act to raise the maximum employe salary from $9800 to $15,000.
3. That Cabinet members be increased from $15,000 to $25,000. That Undersecretaries and the Solicitor General be increased from $10,000 to $20,000. That Assistant Secretaries, Assistant Attorneys General and Assistant Postmasters General, whose salaries range from $9000 to $12,000, be increased to $17,500.
4. That heads of independent agencies and members of independent boards and commissions be increased to $17,500 or $20,000 as determined by the President. Salaries of these people now range from $9000 to $12,000.
5. That the Vice President and the Speaker be raised from $15,000 to $25,000 each. That members of Congress be paid $20,000 instead of $10,000.
6. That the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court be raised from $20,500 to $30,500 and that each associate justice be increased from $20,000 to $30,000. That each judge on the Circuit Courts of Appeals, the Court of Claims and the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals be raised from $12,000 to $22,500. That the Chief Justice of the District Court of the United States for the District be given an increase of $10,500 to $20,500. And that each judge of Federal District Courts and the United States Customs Court be paid $20,000 instead of $10,000.

Flemming

Generally speaking, the program appeared to be well received by the committee although members asked for additional information on a variety of subjects. Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) announced that he would not vote to give Federal workers a substantial boost in salary unless the number of employes were cut drastically.

Chairman Sheridan Downey (D., Calif.), who has a bill in to increase salaries of white-collar employes by 20 per cent, said he was far more interested in pay raises for low-paid employes. He said Chairman Pat McCarran of the Senate Judiciary Committee and Chairman Millard Tydings of an appropriations subcommittee had consented to have salaries of Federal judges and members of Congress considered by the Civil Service Committee.

Senator Byrd registered a mild protest that this phase of the wage

Home Building Hopes Lifted By Agreements

Federal Agencies, Builders Resolve Major Differences

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer.

Government agencies and the building industry resolved some of their differences yesterday, brightening prospects for home construction in 1946.

Main developments were:

1. OPA's agreement to establish rental ceilings in advance of construction and allow them to be high enough to compensate builders for building cost increases since 1939.

2. RFA's agreement to issue firm mortgage insurance commitments to builders seeking FHA financing for rental and sale housing.

Preference to Veterans

3. Pledges by the National Association of Home Builders to give "occupancy preference to veterans in all housing built," to concentrate upon constructing dwelling units for modest income groups, and to limit sales pricing of new housing to current costs plus a "reasonable profit."

All decisions came after a three-day "emergency meeting" of the home builders' association and a one-day meeting of the construction industry advisory group sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

By its decision to place ceilings in advance of construction, OPA eliminated one of the serious bottlenecks to the building of rental units. Real estate men have argued for several weeks that rental units could not be built at current costs—admittedly from 30 to 50 per cent above 1939—and rent at the ceiling set on comparable prewar structures.

OPA said a formula for rent ceilings will be worked out to set

Load of Ashes Falls On Street Corner; Police Hold Driver

A 1½-ton truck crashed into an automobile at 5th and K sts. nw. yesterday, turning it over, causing a collision of three other vehicles and scattering hundreds of pounds of ashes as it overturned.

Police held Howard Gillespie, 26-year-old Negro truck driver, of 644 Orleans pl. ne., on charges of reckless driving and failing to exhibit a permit.

A truck driven by Gillespie crashed into a car operated by Miss Straudia M. Brown, night supervisor at Casualty Hospital, police reported, turning it over. Neither Miss Brown, who lives at 225 6th st. ne., nor the truck driver, was injured.

The truck-car smashup resulted in a collision of two other cars and a cab, which were temporarily halted while the light was changing. Roland Coates, 38-year-old Negro veteran of 2025 Porter pl. nw., a passenger in the cab, received a minor foot injury.

The truck is owned by Bowie's Cinder and Trash Service, 510 Delaware ave. sw.

Arlington Passes 92d Day Without Traffic Fatality

Arlington County has had 92 consecutive days without a fatal traffic accident.

Chief Harry L. Woodyard yesterday reported that during October there were 52 accidents in Arlington, with 16 injuries, but that no deaths resulted from the crashes. Last traffic death was in July. So far this year, there have been five traffic fatalities in Arlington, Chief Woodyard said.

During October, the police chief reported, there were 272 arrests, of which 157 were for traffic violations.

Senators Told Not to Depend On Atom Pact

Harvard President Talks Against Treaty To Outlaw Bomb

By the Associated Press

President James B. Conant of Harvard University yesterday advised a Senate committee against banking on outlawing the bomb.

He expressed his views at joint hearings by Military and Commerce Subcommittees on legislation to set up a national science foundation.

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) brought up the subject by asking if an analogy could be drawn between existing agreements outlawing use of poison gas and suggestions that use of the bomb be banned.

"No," Conant replied. "Poison gas was not used in the last war, not because it was outlawed, but because it was not an effective weapon."

Can't Apply to Bomb

"That certainly can't apply to the atomic bomb," Fulbright commented.

In response to other questions, Conant estimated it might take Russia 5 to 15 years to catch up with the United States in the field of atomic energy, but he said that was "a guessing game."

An eminent chemist, Dr. Conant was a member during the war of the top policy commission of the

Union Is Willing

U. S. Labor Department Seeks To Reopen Bus Strike Parley

By John F. Gerrity
Post Staff Writer

The Labor Department last night moved to end the Greyhound bus strike that has tied up service in 19 Eastern States, and sent a special invitation to company and union officials to reopen negotiations here Monday.

The invitation was sent to the disputants after all-day efforts to induce the company representatives to negotiate either in Washington or Cleveland failed.

R. W. Budd, president of the Central and Illinois Greyhound companies told The Post that he had refused the Conciliation Service's request to arbitrate on the grounds that company negotiators had made their top offer to the union last Tuesday.

Meanwhile, union pickets continued their unbroken parade around the Washington terminal at 11th st. and New York ave. nw., and the company garage at 1345 New York ave. ne.

Union drivers of the Capitol Greyhound, which serves nearby Maryland towns, refused to cross the picket lines, and passengers and baggage were loaded and unloaded on the curbs outside the depot.

Sam Barong, secretary-treasurer of the AFL Amalgamated Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes, clarified the position of the Capitol Greyhound, the only remaining Greyhound line serving Washington from the west.

"Capitol's contract expires on January 16. The 90 per cent strike vote taken by drivers Thursday night did not name a date for the walkout.

"Nevertheless, the vote to strike

3 Waves Were Not Raped, Judge Holds

2 Bellhops Admitted To $750 Bail After Court Rules Against Testimony of Girls

Two Washington bellhops charged with raping three Waves were admitted to bail of $750 each yesterday by Judge Stedman Prescott in Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

In fixing bail, Judge Prescott said that he did not believe a woman could be ravished in the manner in which the Waves had testified they were attacked.

The defendants, Robert Shackelford, 22, charged with rape of all three Waves, and Allen Hughlett, jr., 18, charged with attacking one of them left the courtroom with their counsel, Capt. James R. Miller, after bond had been posted by a professional bondsman.

Judge Prescott told the three Waves that a charge of rape in Maryland is a serious thing, for which the penalty is hanging, and that consequently the law requires that "a woman must fight to the last ditch" in protection of her honor in order to provide a case of rape.

The judge said he just did not believe that the circumstances described by the Waves, none of whom bit, scratched or kicked, was proof of actual rape.

"It's the first time in my 25 years' of legal experience that I have heard of a woman being raped twice without having her clothes torn," the judge said.

Turning to the defendants, he declared that the action of the court did not warrant them to feel that they were free to "exercise their superior strength" in taking from women what they wanted. He said that it is very probable that the testimony, while it did not constitute rape, might prove assault of a serious nature which would be punishable by a strong sentence.

The judge said that one of the Waves apparently was sincere in her efforts to prevent what did transpire but that even she did not put up the resistance required by law.

The Waves denied on the stand that the reason they reported the alleged attacks was because they were late in reporting back to barracks. They also admitted that one of their number had brought the bottle of whisky from which several of the party were said to have drunk.

Greece Needs More Aid, Says Finance Chief

Athens, Nov. 2 (AP).—Gregory Kassamatis, finance minister in Premier Panayotis Kanellopoulos' new cabinet, said today that Greece would seek increased allied aid because "it is humanly impossible for Greece to live on her own lean flesh."

The government's first duty will be financial reconstruction of Greece, he said, and the government plans steps for equitable, quick distribution of all available goods and equitable taxation.

Hebert Favors Plan to Park 4000 Cars at a Dime a Day

By James E. Chinn
Post Staff Writer

"Park all day for a dime" garages beneath three public park areas with space for 4000 cars were approved yesterday by Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.).

He said he looked upon these projects as the first "practical" step toward permanent solution of Washington's acutely serious auto parking problem.

Singled out for initial underground garage development were:

1. The huge Ellipse between the White House and the Washington Monument Grounds.

2. The big plaza in rear of the District Building at 14th and E sts. nw., now used as a parking lot.

3. A section of the Mall just off Constitution ave., between 12th and 14th sts., present site of a squatty row of temporary wartime Government buildings.

Hebert's indorsement of the subsurface garages in the three areas came at the close of a two-day overhauling by the Traffic Subcommittee of the House District Committee, which he heads, of various proposals for breaking the crucial parking jam in the congested business section.

Coupled with his approval of the three projects was an ultimatum to the recently reactivated Motor Vehicle Parking Agency to get results within 90 days.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, advanced the idea of underground garages on the three park sites. Thirteen years ago, he said, these same projects were considered but abandoned, he knew not why.

The cost of the projects at that time were estimated at nearly six million dollars. Broken down, the cost and estimated storage space follows:

	Cars	Cost
Ellipse	2000	$3,000,000
Rear District Bldg.	1080	1,725,000
Mall	960	1,250,000
Total	4040	$5,975,000

General Grant told the subcommittee that to be "commercially profitable," the garages, if built by the Government for Government workers, would have to charge a dime a day as a parking fee. The low rate, he pointed out, would carry operating expenses and eventually liquidate the cost of the garages.

Acting Traffic Director Maurice O. Eldridge suggested that the Ellipse be turned into an open parking lot, stressing that this could

'No Missing Papers'

GOP Senators Say Democrats Block Pearl Harbor Probe

By the Associated Press

Republicans and Democrats fought a new Pearl Harbor battle on the Senate floor yesterday over Republican complaints that their inquiries into the disaster are being blocked.

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) charged he had been denied by a 5-to-3 party vote of a Senate-House inquiry committee the right to check a tip that vital documents are missing from Army and Navy Communications Commission files.

Democratic Leader Barkley (Ky.) said that so far as the committee and its counsel know "there are no missing papers."

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) asserted that William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, had "taken it upon himself to make policy decisions" by inviting the Army to pick some engineers to testify as witnesses.

Senator George (D., Ga.) retorted that Ferguson was trying to prejudice the case by "parading before the public" a memorandum from Mitchell that other committee members didn't know about.

Brewster declared that Army officers had changed their testimony when former Secretary of War Stimson sent Maj. Henry C. Clausen "around the world" to trace down new leads after an Army inquiry board had made its report.

The Republicans complained bitterly that while a committee action earlier in the day opened the way to Government officials to volunteer information, they still are barred from looking at records unless a majority of the committee approves.

Barkley, chairman of the Senate-House group, replied that the inquiry would never get anywhere "if every member were authorized to be a private detective boring around in every department in Washington."

The committee decided to start open hearings November 15.

The verbal battle developed when the two Republican Senators took the floor to report to their colleagues that they didn't think the committee's action yesterday lent itself to the impartial investigation Barkley had promised.

Earlier the 10-member group, on which there are six Democrats and four Republicans, had unanimously approved a request to the President to change an existing executive order.

Barkley explained that if the

Truman Wins Limited Action On Pet Bills

Congress Gets Busy On Jobs Measure And USES Return

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer.

After one week of cracking the whip over Congress, President Truman last night seemed assured of at least compromise action on two of three reconversion issues.

The President's first definite progress in his surprise role as ringmaster was chalked up yesterday in these developments:

1. Representative William M. Whittington, (D., Miss.), chairman of the House Democratic Steering Committee, proposed a sumstitute for the Senate-passed full employment bill and predicted a "constructive" committee compromise.

USES Return Date Set

2. The Senate Appropriations Committee, after conference with Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach and spokesmen for State unemployment systems, considered June, 1946, as a compromise date for returning the United States Employment Service to the States.

On both points, the President had spoken sharply to Congress in his wage-price speech Tuesday night. He charged "damaging" committee delays in reporting full employment legislation and warned against precipitate return of employment offices to the States during the job-hunting demobilization period.

In a fight with Congress, over Ways and Means Committee refusal to report out legislation increasing unemployment compensation, the President had made no progress. As committee lines failed to waver, a House move to discharge the group was shaping up.

20,000 Chinese Reds Besiege Suiyuan City

Trying to Bar Way Of Federal Troops Into Manchuria

Chungking, Nov. 2 (AP).—Twenty thousand Chinese Communists led by one of their top generals are besieging Kweisui, capital of rich Suiyuan Province in Inner Mongolia, Chinese dispatches reported today.

The dispatches said the city was in grave danger and that thousands of inhabitants were pouring out in hurried flight.

Gen. Ho Lung, one of the most able Red commanders, is leading the attack, dispatches said, as the Communists seek to widen their Suiyan holdings and bar any overland movement of central government troops from China to Manchuria.

Tatung Still Held

Communist occupation of Kweisui would seriously interfere with any eastward drive of Government Commander Gen. Fu Tso-yi along the Peiping-Suiyuan Railroad toward Red-held Kalgan, strategic rail center lying northwest of Peiping.

Other dispatches reported besieged Tatung, important rail junction in northern Shansi Province, still as in the hands of its 10,000 nationalist defenders, despite an attack by an estimated 100,000 Reds under the reported direction of Gen. Chu Teh, Communist commander in chief.

Official China awaited the return from Washington of U. S. Ambassador Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley in the hope he might help avert full-scale civil war. While in Peiping Gen. Li Tsung-Jen, highest ranking government officer in the strife-torn north, sounded a lonely note of optimism.

Divided Command Lost Time In Pacific, Gen. Kenney Says

By the Associated Press

Brig. Gen. George C. Kenney told Senators yesterday that time was lost in the war against Japan while the Army and Navy argued and compromised.

"If such delays resulted in prolonging the war just one day, what price can we place upon the lives thus lost?" he asked.

He asserted the war had demonstrated that a single over-all command is required for victory in a theater. He said he was "unable to understand" the arguments of those who oppose unification of the War and Navy Departments under a single Cabinet Secretary.

"I believe it follows naturally that we must have unity of command at the head and heart of our military structure at home," said the general who whipped the Japanese air force all the way from Australia to Japan.

Kenney, who commanded Gen. Douglas MacArthur's air arm for three years, testified before the Military Committee which is considering service merger legislation. He urged immediate consolidation "with coequal, coordinate combat arms of land, sea and air."

The air general's position, stated as the committee completed its hearings closely paralelled that taken by earlier Army and Air Force witnesses.

The Navy has disagreed strongly. The sea service's position was exemplified by a statement filed with the committee today by the Navy League, which identified itself as a nonprofit educational organization of civilians formed in 1922 to support the Navy.

The league urged at least a year of study before Congress acts on

Cairo Police Fight Violent Outbreak on Balfour Day

Hundreds Injured When Anti-Zionists Smash Windows, Loot Homes, Defy Troops

Cairo, Nov. 2 (AP).—Rioting anti-Zionists stormed through Cairo today smashing windows and looting Jewish business houses, and authorities estimated at least 290 civilians and 90 police were injured in the "Balfour Day" outbreak.

While no deaths were reported in Cairo, unofficial and entirely unconfirmed reports said seven persons were killed in similar riots in Alexandria.

Maj. Gen. T. W. Fitzpatrick, acting commandant in Cairo, said the situation was regarded as "well in hand" tonight but Cairo police remained out in full force. Sudanese troops, armed with long whips, also stood at strategic points. He said 150 persons, mostly looters, were arrested.

Police Use Tear Gas

Steel-helmeted police fired into the air, used tear gas, and swung clubs trying to disperse the crowds who seethed into Cairo streets on the twenty-eighth anniversary of the Lord Balfour note promising the Jews a national home in Palestine.

In Palestine, where Balfour Day coincided with an announcement that Lord Gort had resigned as high commissioner, because of his health, there were only disturbances accompanied by a nation-wide Arab general strike.

In London, the British government, through Secretary of Colonies George Hall, served an ultimatum to terrorists in Palestine's Jewish community that unless there is a cessation of the "dastardly series of outrages" in the Holy Land, negotiations for settling the Jewish problem would be halted. He said the government was satisfied that the Jewish people as a whole were not responsible.

He referred to yesterday's organized attacks on Palestine's transportation system that cost five lives and wounded at least eight persons. He delivered the warning in Commons while announcing Lord Gort's resignation from the Palestine post.

Rioting Kept in Bounds

Fitzpatrick said the Cairo rioting was kept from spreading to the European parts of the city. Foreign establishments in the riot area also were attacked.

He said a synagogue was set afire by the rioters with "fairly extensive" damage.

Declaring the rioters had "fought themselves out and are now licking their wounds," Fitzpatrick said he did not anticipate renewed out-

U. S. Relations With Brazil Not Upset by Change

Diplomatic relations between the United States and Brazil will not be interrupted as a result of the change in regime at Rio de Janeiro.

Secretary of State Byrnes announced last night that the United States Ambassador to Brazil, Adolf A. Berle, jr., had been instructed to "carry on normal relations" with the new administration. He stated further that the question of recognition did not arise since "established procedures were followed in the assumption of the executive power by the President of the Federal Supreme Court of Brazil." Byrnes, in making the announcement, said that consultation with other American republics reflected general agreement with the State Department's position.

Gen. Getulio Vargas, the "strong man" who ruled Brazil for 15 years, resigned October 29 after the army, navy and air force withdrew their support from his regime. Chief Justice Jose Linhares automatically became President under the 1937 constitution. Linhares has promised that elections will be held as schedule early next month.

Fighting in Batavia Breaks Java Truce

Soekarno Helps Stop Malegang Hostilities Before New Outbreak

Batavia, Nov. 2 (AP).—Sharp encounters with Indonesian extremists broke out in Batavia today after heavy fighting at Malegang was halted under a temporary truce negotiated with the aid of President Soekarno of the "Indonesian Republic."

Fighting began in Indonesian headquarters behind the Hotel Des Indes, and snipers fired machine guns for an hour before Britirh Seaforth Highlanders restored order. Casualties were light.

RAF planes again strafed Indonesian forces battling British Indian troops in Magelang before the truce was achieved. The planes also dropped supplies to British forces at the naval base of Soerabaja, where a spokesman said the situation remained "very delicate."

Returning pilots said they saw fighting in progress by the light of huge fires raging in the naval base city.

In Magelang, 180 miles southeast of Soerabaja, British and Indonesian representatives were conferring.

Last night one company of Ghurkas had been hard pressed in Magelang but the situation was restored after reinforcements arrived. The RAF planes enabled the Ghurkas to reoccupy a part of the town and reduce danger to the Magelang Hospital, where many women and children had taken refuge.

Dutch forces were reported able to cope with roving unorganized bandits from east and central Java on the outskirts of Batavia. The Dutch estimated their number at approximately 30,000. They were making no concentrated attacks but fighting in packs of a few hundred.

Menawhile little progress was reported in negotiations beteween the Dutch and the Indonesians toward ending the prolonged strife.

7000 Years Old

Earliest Man Found in Iraq By Scientists

London, Nov. 2 (INS).—Dr. Haji Alasil, head of the Iraq delegation of the United Nations Conference, disclosed today that evidence had been unearthed in Iraq placing the dawn of civilization between 7000 and 8000 years ago.

Hitherto, the beginning of civilization was believed to date back 5000 or 6000 years.

The finds were made by a team of archaeologists, led by an Englishman, Seton Hall, at Hassuna, some 400 miles north of Iraq's Ur Province.

That man ended his nomad wanderings and took up farming in settled communities between 5000 and 6000 B. C., was indicated by the well built houses and tools and utensils of fine craftsmanship unearthed. The archeologists have been excavating Hassuna for the past two years.

"We were able to verify the antiquity of the finds by the state of the earth and ashes and by the types of pottery unearthed," Dr. Al Asil said.

The archeologist disclosed that man of 8000 years ago was little different from present-day variety in respect to mentality and strength. This was ascertained from exhumed skeletons.

He said prized finds included a sickle with a 24-inch blade perfectly carved out of matched pieces of flint glued together with bitumen, and a 15-inch handle made out of wood too ancient to identify.

"This 8000-year-old farming instrument must be the oldest instrument in the world," he declared.

"Its cutting edge is still sharp.

"It is the first sign of civilization and marks the beginning of husbandry and the end of man as a nomad."

Handmade bricks, made out of mud baked in the sun were recovered.

breaks tomorrow. Only sporadic outbursts were noted in a drive through the city late today and tonight.

[The Greek Cathedral at Alexandria was stoned; the clinic of an American dentist, H. F. Curtis, was ransacked, and windows of the American Seamen's Club were broken, according to the United Press. British military cars and servicemen's clubs were attacked, and European women were reported molested in the markets.—Editor's note.]

American and British troops in Cairo were ordered into their barracks.

The rioting broke out in Malika Farida Square in the heart of the city, moved through the principal thoroughfares and all the main squares, and wound up with the greatest disorders in the Malika Farida Square in the Bazaar section.

Jewish Stores Looted

Shop windows were smashed, with the Jewish-owned establishments suffering the heaviest. Some Jewish stores were looted.

One alert Jewish shopowner hung an Egyptian flag from his window and the rioters ceased their bombardment with bricks.

The demonstrators marched also to Abdien Palace, one of the residences of King Farouk. The King was not there, so the crowd returned to Malika Farida Square, named after Egypt's queen.

The route taken by the rioters was strewn with smashed glass.

The largest Jewish department store in Cairo was set afire, but the blaze was extinguished by fire brigades. Outside the Azahar Mosque, largest in the Moslem world, police used tear gas in an effort to disperse the crowds, who hurled stones in return.

Pamphlets were distributed among the crowds asserting it was necessary to "wake up the Zionists from their dream of a home in Palestine." The British were blamed for trying to create a national home for the Jews.

The general strike itself halted all communications in Cairo, and delegates of five Arab associations presented notes of protest to all foreign diplomats.

"We beg to inform your country that all the Arab world is starting this day an active struggle against Zionists who will threaten the Arab world by their existence in Palestine," the note said.

Demand Disarmament

The note demanded that the British disarm Jews in Palestine and halt immediately immigration of Jews into the Holy Land.

Other rioting in Egypt occurred in the cities of Port Said, Zagizig and Mansurn, but there were no casualties.

The general strike spread also to Syria and Lebanon, where transportation facilities were shut down and demonstrations against Zionism were held. In Damascus Arabs staged a peaceful demonstration.

In Commons, Hall said Lord Gort's successor would be named "as soon as possible," and that J. V. W. Shaw, chief secretary, would administer the Palestine government for the present.

In Palestine, where the Arab general strike followed on the heels of yesterday's attacks paralyzing of the country's railroad system, scattered incidents of stone throwing by the Arabs was reported.

Peron Made Death Threats, Collier's Says

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Collier's Magazine says Col. Juan Peron, one-time vice president of Argentina, threatened the lives of two American newspapermen and, by a slightly veiled implication, the life of Spruille Braden last June 13.

Braden, then United States Ambassador to Argentina and at present Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin American affairs, had no comment on the article.

Collier's story, written by Joseph Newman, New York Herald-Tribune correspondent in Argentina, says Peron met Braden at Buenos Aires and "delivered some cold-blooded threats which made Braden look up and listen in amazement."

Newman continues:

"Peron announced that the lives of two American correspondents, those of the New York Times and the New York Herald Tribune, were in danger because of the reports they were sending to the United States; that he had received word that Braden had been talking with the businessmen who were conducting the campaign against him; that his people, in their fanatical adoration of him, were capable of murdering anyone who stood in the Colonel's way."

In addition to himself, Newman says that Peron's threat was directed at Arnaldo Cortesi, New York Times correspondent.

"Braden was impressed by this unprecedented outburst, but not intimidated," Newman writes. "He said that it did not matter if he or any other Americans were murdered; what was important was that we stand by our democratic principles for which we have waged two world wars and lost many lives."

Five days later, Newman says, Braden delivered a stiff protest from the State Department. Later, in a meeting with Braden, the Argentine official reluctantly gave the ambassador "the necessary guarantee for the security of the American correspondents," according to the article.

king and probably will not decide until after an impending trip to Washington.)

"There may be a small war now in China," between the central government and Chinese Communists, Li acknowledged, but "major differences can be decided by negotiations."

Hurley generally is credited with helping to bring the Chinese Communist leader, Gen. Mao Tse-tung, to Chungking to begin such negotiations. They now are deadlocked.

Blame Reds for Violence

Li blamed Communists for current violence, said neither American men nor American equipment were being used against the Reds. He predicted that Communist efforts to control the north will fail because, he said, they lack both troops and popular support.

(Tientsin reported that the first contingent of 1500 Marines sailed for home from Taku. Approximately 70,000 have been scattered through the troubled north from Tsingtao to Tientsin, Peiping and Chinwangtao, disarming Japanese and waiting for central government troops to arrive and assume control).

Although Mao and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek reached an understanding at Chungking, Li continued, "either Mao didn't give the order to his subordinates to stop fighting, or he doesn't have control over them."

Although massed Communist forces blocked the overland route, other government troops carried in U. S. transports began landing at two ports in Manchuria—the day Russian occupation forces were scheduled to begin withdrawing. Landings were at Hulutao, 70 miles northeast of the trouble spot of Chinwangtao, and at Yinkgow, across Liaotung Bay. Both ports have rail links with Mukden.

British Dock Strikers Start To Work Under 30-Day Truce

London, Nov. 2 (AP).—Thousands of striking dock workers, whose six weeks of idleness had paralyzed nearly all Britain's major ports, agreed today to return to work Monday under a 30-day truce to permit negotiation of their dispute over wages and welfare conditions.

Overwhelming votes to end the unauthorized strike by 43,000 men were registered at affected ports in Britain, Scotland and Northern Ireland. But the strikers warned a nationwide walkout would be called if the dispute is not settled within a month. Strikers at Liverpool, wheer the walkout began 39 days ago, were the first to endorse the conciliation proposal.

Thousands of British troops have been unloading food ships—and later all cargoes—during the strike.

President approves the committee request, the procedure will be this:

Any individual in the government can volunteer information to a committee member. But the member will have to ask the committee for its approval before he can go to a government department and look at records.

Brewster asked specifically to look at War Department records to see if an important telegram actually is missing. He wanted to check communication commission files to determine if certain radio monitoring records have been destroyed. He offered to take a member of the committee's legal staff with him.

The committee voted down the request.

Ferguson Seeks Records

Then Ferguson sought approval for a proposal under which the President would direct all Government officials to give the committee, individual members and counsel, access to all records and documents.

Five Democrats voted against this. They were Senators Barkley and George (Ga.), and Representatives Cooper (D., Tenn.), Clark (D., N. C.) and Murphy (D., Pa.). Three Republicans, Ferguson, Brewster and Representative Gearhart (Calif.) supported it.

The committee then agreed to ask the President to modify an executive order of October 23 to permit Government officials to "volunteer any information of which they may have knowledge bearing on the subject of the committee's investigation."

The October 23 order was described by Mitchell, committee counell, as a modification of an August 11 order by the President which prohibited Army and Navy personnel from discussing or disclosing records in connection with the Navy's breaking of the Japanese diplomatic code in November, 1941.

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal recently urged the Senate Naval Affairs Committee not to make public a portion of an inquiry board's report including intercepted code messages.

Backed by Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King, he said any such disclosure would dry up some continuing sources of information on which the Navy relies.

HOUSING

a limit above which regional administrators cannot go, but that the ceilings will be "completely adequate" to cover increased costs in all areas. They will be worked out from the builders', plans and a commitment given by OPA that if those plans are followed the ceilings will stand.

The NHA agreement, according to the builders, was an assurance needed to bolster construction confidence during the reconversion period and an added guarantee that financial arrangements can be made with the housing agency despite the uncertainty of building costs.

All controversies between builders and various Government agencies were not settled yesterday. The question of price ceilings on homes remains unsettled, but builders "have taken new encouragement" from Reconversion Director John W. Snyder's statement that no such ceilings are contemplated. The prospect of scarce materials also still haunts both groups—but the principal deadlocks holding back construction appear to have been broken.

Rental Units Needed

Rental buildings units are needed more than new homes in many areas and there is a great demand for them among veternas. It is believed considerable rental construction will now be undertaken rapidly, although some industry leaders yesterday declared, "We want to see some of the new rental ceilings decided by OPA before we grow optimistic."

Joseph E. Merrion, president of the home builders' association, in announcing his group's decisions urged homeseekers to "temporarily put up with the shortage in housing as they put up with shortages in other amenities of living until our production of new homes begins to equal unprecedented demand."

Home builders in return pledged to "use their full resources to build the greatest possible volume of dwelling units, limited only by the availability of materials and manpower," he declared.

OPA officials declared the new higher rent ceilings on new structures did not indicate a prospect that old rent ceilings woud be raised. Real estate groups are expected to continue to insist, however, that the approximately 4 per cent increases in rents during the war is far below the general average increase permitted for other facilities and that they are entitled to an increase under the cost-of-living formula by which the Government sets wages and prices.

COMMAND

the merger proposal and said the shift would be "a grab for power."

It went on:

"We subscribe to the charge made by Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King that any move which places all military power under control of one man is revolutionary.

Would Have Prevented War

"It is as much of a revolution as any military coup anywhere in the world, whether by force of arms or by stealth of selfish political interest."

General Kenney told the committee he did not believe Japan would have dared war against this country if we had had, at the time of Pearl Harbor, bombers which could have duplicated the nonstop B-29 flight from Japan completed here Thursday night.

Asked by Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) how much time such bombers would have saved in the Pacific campaign, Kenney replied:

"If the Japs knew we had that type of airpower I don't believe they would have started the war in the first place."

Disputes King's Statement

General Kenney sharply questioned earlier testimony by Admiral King, chief of naval operations, that the Japanese had more airplanes in Japan at the end of the war than at the start. Senator Maybank asked about this.

"I can't understand how anybody could make such a statement," the general said. He described the remaining enemy planes as "an ill-assorted lot of junk," mostly without gas, and said that even Japan's "fifth team" of fliers had been lost.

If the Emperor had ordered all planes to fly past and given a week for the flight, Kenney said he doubted that 500 planes could have been in the air.

Army to Seek Distance Mark With B-29s

The Army is planning another endurance test for its B-29 Superfortresses—an attempt to break the 7-year-old world's record for a nonstop distance flight.

The four B-29's which completed the first nonstop flight from Japan to Washington Thursday night covered 6544 miles. The record is 7158 miles, set in 1938 by two British planes flying from Ismelia, Egypt, to Port Darwin, Australia.

Army spokesmen said there will be plenty of opportunities to shoot at the British record. It has been decided to return several hundred B-29's to the United States on nonstop flights via the north Pacific-Great Circle route. Most of them are expected to bring back men eligible for discharge.

The next B-29 venture will be an attempt to fly from Hokkaido, northernmost of the Japanese home islands, to Puerto Rico, 8088 miles, or Batista, Cuba, 7693 miles. No date has been set for the undertaking.

One of the Superforts which made the Japan to Washington hop had planned to fly on to Puerto Rico but was prevented by fuel-consuming headwinds over the Pacific.

Air Forces officials said all that is needed to beat the British record is an even break from the weather. North Pacific weather, they said, is about the worst and most unpredictable in the world.

ATOM

Government on the whole field of uranium from which atomic energy may be released.

Meanwhile Senator Taft (R., Ohio) suggested in the Senate that use of the atomic bomb might be successfully outlawed by giving the United Nations peace organization police power to see that no nation makes one.

He said this might include provisions for inspections in all countries and an understanding that United Nations forces will "move in" if evidence of preparations to use atomic energy militarily is found.

No Reliance on Pacts

The Ohioan advanced this idea during another round of impromptu Senate debate on the atomic bomb and the future. Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.) touched off the discussion with a caution against reliance on a "paper" agreement to outlaw the bomb.

"Any international agreement," Hatch said, "must be backed by something more than the paper on which it is written."

Hatch said he brought up the subject because Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) had urged Thursday that the United States seek an international agreement not to use the bomb.

"You cannot outlaw it by simple agreement and I don't want the people of the world to think that the U. S. Senate thinks that," Hatch said.

McKellar, leaving the presiding officer's chair and taking the floor again as he did Thursday, said "the agreement has to be implemented of course." He said it Hatch had interpreted his remarks otherwise he had "misapprehended" them.

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) came in with this rhetorical question:

"If you can outlaw the bomb why can't you outlaw cannon and airplanes and navies?"

Cooperate for Peace, Moscow Warns World

London, Nov. 2 (U.P.)—The Moscow radio, warning that World War II "has demonstrated that only frank cooperation between peace loving nations can save the world from unprecedented disaster," said tonight that other countries in a few years may develop atomic bombs a thousand times more powerful than those used against Japan.

Wheeling Track Sold for $262,500

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 2 (U.P.)—The Wheeling Downs race track was sold today at public auction to a group of Wheeling businessmen for $262,500.

The group's bid for the Wheeling Fair Grounds, which includes the track, was high among the four offers received. The other bids came from the present operators of the track, John G. Masoni and Samuel C. Lombardo; Michael Kelly of Clevelnad, said to represent Ohio Sports Enterprises, Inc., and E. E. Golden, representing Wheeling interests.

The successful group was represented by Attorney Carl Galbraith.

The grounds, formerly operated by the West Virginia State Fair Association, went into receivership in 1931.

is in, and if the drivers voluntarily decide to walk out, it will be interpreted as a sympathetic strike."

If Capitol Greyhound does strike approximately 1500 daily passengers, many of whom are commuting Washington Government workers, will be affected.

The Conciliation Service invitation to reexamine the issues in the dispute, setting the meeting for Monday at 2 p. m., pointed out that in view of the urgent need for transportation "it was the duty and the responsibility of the concerned parties to reopen negotiations to speed the end of the strike."

The AFL union immediately accepted, but no answer was made by the company last night.

Also last night Barong, said that beside settling the wage dispute, principal difference between the company and union, the union hoped to iron out other issues in the new negotiations.

The union is demanding 5.75 cents a mile for drivers and a 30 per cent increase for other workers. Company officials have offered 5.4 cents a mile for drivers and a flat 10 cents an hour to garage and other maintenance workers.

U. S. to Ship Europe More Dairy Produce

Greatly increased quantities of dairy products will be sent to Europe this winter, the Department of Agriculture announced yesterday. Allocations for the last three months of this year total more than 450,000,000 pounds and have been made to UNRRA, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, French North Africa, and the United Kingdom, the department said.

These increased allocations reflect decreased military requirements and a record production of milk. Civilians still will have more diary products than during the war, it was pointed out, with only butter now being under rationing or distribution control.

Meantime, two sugar developments were announced by the department:

1. The Cuban mission which has been negotiating with this country for the sale of Cuba's next three sugar crops returned home for further instructions. Prices to be paid for the sugar are not in dispute, but Cuba wants to sell its next three crops under the same price guarantee while this country wants to buy only the 1946 output at this time.

2. Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson said United States Army officers have verified the existence in Java of one million tons of sacked sugar and the Dutch authorities report 400,000 other tons in bins.

"Unsettled" conditions in Java—due to fighting in the area—make it impossible to estimate when the sugar can be brought to the United States, Anderson warned.

PARKING

be done without destroying any of the trees which line its perimeter.

"Thoroughly Practical"

"It is a thoroughly practical and meritorious plan," he declared, "and would provide parking space for 2000 cars."

General Grant, however, pointed out that the Ellipse is used "intensively" for recreation, and said if the Eldridge proposal was carried out "one part of the public would be injured to benefit another."

F. W. Lovejoy of the Public Roads Administration, told the subcommittee the parking agency of which he is a member already had selected sites downtown and along the "fringe" for establishment of off street parking facilities. As soon as funds are forthcoming, he explained, the agency would get busy and "put in the facilities."

Short Time Parker

Police Inspector Arthur E. Miller declared that the "most pressing need" is off street facilities for the short time parker, and recommended that more space be made available by a complete ban on all day parking throughout the business section.

Additional parking meters he predicted might aid in breaking up the overtime parking evil, and give the "transient" parker a chance at the limited curb spaces.

Officials of the American Automobile Association and the Keystone Motor Club who initiated an all out drive for more parking space about 10 days ago, made a plea for funds for the Parking Agency so its program can be put into operation "with the utmost expeditions."

Price Policies Hurt Veterans, Ex-Aide Says

William S. Bradley, director of the surplus consumer goods in the Department of Commerce, resigned yesterday and then criticized Government surplus pricing policies and its treatment of veterans.

Revised regulations covering surplus property rights of veterans were issued "over the positive protest of the Department of Commerce," Bradley decalred, and place the veteran "just below the eleemosynary institution and the voluntary fire department as a priority claimant" for surplus property.

The Surplus Property Administration, after placing the veteran in this position, Bradley declared, promised him the Government's lowest price rate on individual items such as a monkey wrench, a hammer, or a razor needed in his business.

"It was pointed out to the new Surplus Property Administration in the strongest possible terms that no Government agency presently created and designated by the Adminstration for the handling of surplus was equipped or staffed to handle this type of retail service to the veterans, he said.

The promise thus was "foolish, impracticable, and unworkable," Bradley declared, asserting that many other surplus property promises to veterans "will, in time, prove to be only a further delusion . . . of which we have already had far too much."

Bradley further scored the Surplus Property Administration for turning down his policy of sales at one price to each level of the trade, with normal trade discounts allowed. The policy of variable pricing now in effect he termed a scramble which is "further confused" by the fact that a retail also may be a veteran.

The division which Bradley headed will be transferred to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on Monday, anyway, as a result of recent surplus property agency changes. Most of the present staff, however, will remain with on duty, Department of Commerce officials said last night.

Oil Agreement With England Sent to Senate

President Truman yesterday submitted the new Anglo-American petroleum agreement to the Senate for its ratification.

The agreement was worked out in London recently by the British and an American delegation headed by Interior Secretary Ickes. It replaces an earlier agreement which former President Franklin D. Roosevelt withdrew after it was criticized by industry.

The agreement, involving the United States and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, was signed last month in London. It was made public then.

Sends Message

The President's message follows: "To the Senate of the United States:

"With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, if it approves thereof, I transmit herewith an agreement on petroleum between the Government of the United States of America and the government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland signed in London September 24, 1945.

"With the agreement I transmit for the information of the Senate the report made to me by the Secretary of State relating thereto, together with a copy of a letter addressed to me by the Secretary of the Interior and petroleum administrator for war relating to the agreement, and also a list of territories to which the agreement is intended to apply."

Senate Adds 14th 'Sacred Cow' Agency

Army Engineers Put On Exempted List In Reorganization

The Senate added a 14th agency yesterday to the list of government boards, commissions and bureaus marked untouchable in its version of legislation authorizing the President to reorganize the executive branch.

By a roll call vote of 36 to 18 the chamber approved an amendment by Senator Overton (D.,La.) exempting civil functions of the Army Engineers Corps from reorganization.

Overton argued that the Judiciary Committee in reporting the bill had classified 13 agencies as "acred cows." He added that to leave the Army Engineers out of the same classification was to "invite" the President to give such jobs as river control and harbor work to some other government branch.

Marked for Exemption

The other agencies marked for exemption by the committee are the Interstate Commerce, Federal Communications, Federal Trade, Securities and Exchange, Tariff and Federal Power Commissions, the National Mediation, National Railroad Adjustment and Railroad Retirement Boards, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Land Bank System, the District of Columbia government and the General Accounting Office.

r -or hrdlu etaoi shrdl emfwyp

Senator Murdock (D., Utah), floor manager for the measure, debated vainly against Overton's amendment. He declared it was opening the way for further changes which would destroy effectiveness of the legislation.

"We can't get reorganization unless we are willing t odelegate some of the powers to the President and repost some confidence in him," Murdock told the Senate.

Expect Vote Next Week

With many amendments remaining to be acted upon, the bill apparently will not reach a final vote until next week. Leaders had difficulty keeping anything resembling a quorum on the floor.

Under the committee's recommendations, either house of Congress could keep a presidential reorganization plan from going into effect by adopting a simple resolution of disapproval. If the Congress took no action the President's shifts would be made.

The Administratoion would like to get rid of that feature. Senator Donnell (R., Mo.) counseled a "positive" approach to the problem. He presented an amendment which would require active approval of both houses before any reorganization plan could be put into force. The committee bill, he complained, is a "delegation of legislative powers to the President."

Duce's Brain Doesn't Show Evil Traits

By the Associated Press

Microscopic examination of tissue from Benito Mussolini's brain by Army doctors in this country has given no clue as to how Il Duce got that way.

Col. J. E. Ash, director of the Army Medical Museum, told a reporter yesterday that "two scraps" from the forebrain of the fallen dictator have been received at the museum. He said that still incomplete study of the specimens his disclosed "no disease or structural abnormalities" such as often account for personality traits.

But Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of the Government's St. Elizabeth Mental Hospital, said absence of any physical or structural defects in Mussolini's gray matter wouldn't preclude the possibility of a mental or personality disorder.

What About Ley's Brain

The subject came up when a reporter inquired whether anything had been heard of the whereabouts of te brai nof Dr. Robert Ley, the Nazi leader who hanged himself rather than face trial as a war criminal.

A recent dispatch from Nuernberg reported that Ley's brain was en route to the office of the Army surgeon general in Washington, but Colonel Ash, who would handle such things, said he hasn't been informed that the Ley brain is headed toward his laboratories.

Dr. Overholser said Ley's brain should make "an interesting study" because Ley reportedly had suered damage to the frontal lobe in an air crash in 1917.

Disorder Can Be Hidden

Informed of the Army's preliminary report on Mussolini's thinking cap, Overholser declared:

"Oftentimes, the presence of physical abnormalities of the brain is the key to the presence of a mental disorder, but on the other hand, a mental disorder may exist where there is no discernible brain damage.

"Factors other than the physical condition of the brain may account for how a man behaves. The environment in which he lives, the chemistry of his body—particularly the action of his endocrine glands—can have an effect on how a man's brain works, and thus how he behaves."

Microscope Does Not Tell

Said Colonel Ash:

"You can't tell from microscopic examination of a man's brain whether he's been a big shot or not. In fact, you can't tell a genius from an ordinary man by such tests.

"The microscope would, however, show up gross structural defects of the brain—such as those present in the brain of a moron. There is no evidence of such structural defects in the specimens we have of Mussolini's brain. He certainly was no 'moron.'"

3 Japs Jailed As Killers of Doolittle's Men

Tokyo, Nov. 2 (AP).—Three suspected executioners of Doolittle fliers and the head of Japan's Gestapo were jailed today in a day which also saw General MacArthur freeze security transactions of the 15 greatest financial houses in the Empire.

In bleak Omori prison camp was Lieut. Gen. Shigeru Sawada, former deputy chief of the Imperial General Staff, who commanded the Shanghai area when three captured Doolight fliers fell before a firing squad October 15, 1942.

Also placed in Omori for questioning was Lieut. Yusei Wamitsu, son of the president of the Greater East Asia Independence Society. The third suspect, a major Hata, was in custody in the Tokyo military hospital with stomach ulcers.

Genki Abe, former Japanese home minister who led in organizing the terroristic "thought" police which at times out-Gestapoed the Nazi Gestapo, also surrendered and was clapped into Omori.

MacArthur had ordered his arrest on war criminal charges.

MacArthur's directive freezing security transactions applied to such well-known family empires as Mitsui, Mitsubishi, Yasuda and Kawasaki—some of wheih involves the fortune of the Emperor himself—all marked for dissolution.

MacArthur also dissolved Dojinkai, the Japanese public health organization. Far from being an institution similar to the Rockefeller Foundation, as Prince Konoye claimed, Allied headquarters said they had found Dojinkai's medical pretensions seriously compromised by outright propaganda activity.

Brig. Gen. Elliot R. Thorpe, head of the counterintelligence section, reported that the Allied Army of Occupation must remain vigilant against fanatic Japanese who still dream of conquest.

The attitude of revenge now is limited among the Japanese, he said, but it would be folly to assume that thousands of returning soldiers and more particularly the terrorists of the rabid gendarmerie of Japan would abandon overnight their deeply indictrinated fanaticism.

CIO Threatens to Enjoin OPA If Auto Prices Jump Above '42

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer.

Walter P. Reuther, vice president of the CIO United Auto Workers, yesterday disclosed that he will seek a court injunction against any OPA order which fixes 1946 automobile prices above the 1942 levels.

In a press conference here, Reuther said his union "will fight against increase in car prices just as hard as we are determined to fight for the 30 per cent increases in wage rates."

He cited the report released Thursday by Secretary of Commerce Wallace as proving the industry could pay higher wages without an increase of the 1942 prices for autos. In fact, he added, correction of the Wallace report to conform with present conditions and production prospects indicates that the auto industry can grant a 34 per cent wage boost, grant it now, and still earn more profits than in the 1936-39 period.

Bowles to Issue Prices

OPA Chief Chester Bowles announced Thursday that he would soon issue the ceiling prices for 1946 model cars, but declined to state whether they would be increased above the 1942 levels. Reuther, meantime, disclosed that he had demanded that Bowles make public the data on which the industries based their price applications.

Bowles has refused, on grounds that the figures are confidential, Reuther continued, but added his belief that the industry "high pressure boys are blackjacking him to keep them secret on the threat of going to Congress" and lobbying for removal of OPA appropriations.

"When we ask for wages," he said, "we have to give all the facts. When they ask for prices, their data are confidential.

"In the event that OPA orders increased selling prices on cars above the 1942 level, we will then take the first step toward an injunction against OPA setting aside and enjoining the OPA order by filing immediately on behalf of the General Motors workers and all consumers and protesting with the administrator as provided in the Emergency Control Act. We will demand a showing of the economic facts upon which the OPA order is based—a showing to which the protestant is entitled under the law, in the event the administrator denies this protest."

In declaring that the Commerce Department report, which said the automobile industry could grant 15 per cent wage increases in 1946 and 10 per cent more in 1947, actually meant that a higher figure could be granted immediately, Retuher argued.

1. The report was prepared last spring, on the assumption the war would continue into 1946. It thus assumed a basic wage rate of $1.20 an hour and that high volume production would not be reached until 1947..

2. The basic wage rate is now $1.12 an hour, so that the Commerce Department estimate of 25 per cent more than $1.20 works out to 34 per cent more than $1.12.

3. The total increase can be paid now, rather than over a period of two years, because the production levels Wallace estimated would be reached in 1947 will actually be reached in Mary of next year.

Reuther charged that General Motors, with which corporation he is now negotiating on his 30 per cent wage increase proposal is engaged in a sitdown strike because "they can't lose." His reference was to tax provisions which provides rebates of past taxes if profits fall below war levels.

In this law, providing funds to ease industrial reconversion, there is nothing to prevent the money being used to ease human reconversion, he said.

Policy Not on Agenda

The fact that discussion of the wage-price issue is not on the agenda of the labor-management conference meeting here on Monday he termed a "tragedy" and said the CIO will try to put the item at the top of a rewritten agenda.

Meantime, preparations for the conference continued, with fresh batches of industry and labor delegates visiting President Truman, and the Cabinet giving consideration to the problems involved.

As he left the White House, James Tanham, vice president of the Texas Co. and a conference delegate, told reporters that "collective bargaining doesn't get anywhere unless there is responsibility to carry out a contract after it is laid."

R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Automobile Workers, said he would enter the conference with an "open mind" but observed:

"I'm hopeful something can be worked out, although I wouldn't go so far as to say something will be worked out at the labor-management conference."

Like Old Town Meeting

Charles E. Wilson, president of General Motors, another White House caller, likened the forthcoming conference to an "old New England town meeting on a tremendous scale."

He said that it would be a sort of "citizens meeting" in which the men experienced in labor and management will be the citizens and try to make a recommendation to the country.

Neither side, he said, is in a position to make definite commitments binding upon unions and employers.

After yesterday's 130-minute Cabinet session, Attorney General Clark said its principal topic of discussion was the approaching labor meeting, called by Mr. Truman to seek a substitute for the War Labor Board and the wartime no-strike no-lockout agreement.

The President's brief speech at the conference opening will not be broadcast nationally, the White House said.

Girl Indicted For Hatchet Death of Man

New York, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Lena Theresa Neinstedt, pretty, 16-year-old hatchet murderess, who drank four shots of whisky and wrote her boy friend a love letter to calm herself after killing John Wagner, 71, in his tailor shop, was indicted today on a charge of murder in the first degree.

"I really didn't mean to kill Pop, because he was a pretty nice old man," Miss Neinstedt said, as she chain-smoked cigarettes.

Miss Neinstedt, a fresh-faced brunette, was charged with killing the aged tailor because "he wanted to hold my hand." She admitted killing him with a miniature hatchet she always carried in her purse.

"I went home and drank four shots of rye afterwards," she told reporters. "I always kept a bottle in my dresser drawer. Then I wrote a letter to Chick, my boy friend in the service. Sweet talk like that helped me get calm again."

Downs asked Miss Neinstedt during court proceedings if she had an attorney.

"What's that?" she asked a matron. "Oh, a lawyer. Sure, my aunt got me a lawyer."

problem should be considered by the Downey committee.

Flemming recalled the President's comments on Federal salaries such as "members of Congress are grossly underpaid" and Government wages are pitiful and inadequate.

He then commented: "The President's statement is a challenge to all of us who are connected with the Government to raise our sights in terms o fthe things that need to be done in order to make the Government stand out as one of the most progressive employers in the Nation, and thus attract to its service and hold in its service persons of outstanding qualifications."

Justifies Increase

Under sharp questioning by Senator Byrd, Flemming gave this justification of a flat 20 per cent increase in pay of white-collar employes whose salaries are fixed by the Classification Act:

1. That the average annual straight time earning of Federal employes covered by the bill had increased from $1929 in January, 1941, to $2340 in July, 1945, or a percentage increase of 21.3 per cent. This compares, he said, to at least 30 per cent which had been given to the majority of industry workers.

2. The cost of living since January 1, 1941, he said, "has increased by approximately 30 per cent, which means that there must be an additional percentage increase of 7.2 in the present average annual straight time earnings of Federal employes covered by this bill in order to make sure that their 1945 dollars will purchase as much as their 1941 dollars."

3. That 12 per cent additional is being asked in line with the President's statement Tuesday that "wage increases are imperative." Flemming pointed out that the most conservative proposals in private industry for wage increases on top of the 30 per cent already received since 1941 have ranged from 10 to 12 per cent.

"We submit," he said, "that the Government, as an employer, is being extremely conservative in suggesting an increase of only 12 per cent on top of the increase needed to bring Federal earnings into line with the cost of living."

Byrd Wants Data

Byrd brought out that other considerations were involved besides the cost of living and that the entire Government-industry picture must be studied if the wage increase was to be justified on that basis. He hinted that Federal workers were treated more liberally in regard to sick and annual leave and retirement benefits. He asked for and received the committee's approval for a comparison of the Federal retirement system with those in effect for major industries such as duPont, General Motors, Eastman Kodak, General Electric, American Telephone and others.

Byrd also asked for specific data on the upgrading of employes during the war and he urged a study be made of all the employes in a typical agency. Flemming answered by citing the fact that upgrading in industry had been much greater than in Government. He pointed out that the average Federal worker received a 16 per cent increase in salary by the Downey-Jackson Act that became effective on July 1 and another 5.3 per cent increase through in-grade promotions, making the 21.3 total. He again compared this with the industrial worker's 30 per cent.

While Senator Byrd was demanding a deep cut in the number of Federal workers, Flemming said that Federal employment had dropped 340,000 in the first six weeks after VJ-Day and that October would show an additional reduction of nearly 200,000. He predicted the Federal population would drop to two million by June 30, a reduction of more than 900,000 in a year.

The reductions, Flemming said, would bring the number of white-collar workers covered by the bill down to 860,000 by June 30, and based on that figure, the cost of the 20 per cent feature was put at 403 million dollars annually. Increases proposed for officials would bring it up to $415,570,000.

Other Groups Unnamed

Byrd pointed out—and correctly—that this wouldn't be the total cost, as the bill didn't cover all Federal employes. He said the postal employes and the Government's industrial workers, who total more than 1,500,000 and who aren't covered in the bill, would ask for similar increases. Incidentally, these groups are asking for 30 per cent additional.

In laying down the case for raising the ceiling from $9800 to $15,000, the Civil Service commissioner said the present low ceiling discourages highly competent persons from entering the service and it drives efficient employes in the service into industry. He cited cases of employes paid between $6000 and $7000 a year who quit to take private jobs that paid twice the salary. And he also cited cases of employes who elected to remain in Government after they had been offered twice and three times the salary by industry.

Atomic Bomb Scare Cut by De Seversky

Tokyo, Nov. 2 (AP).—Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky declared today the fearsome atomic bomb that hastened Japan's defeat could kill no more people than a regular 10-ton bomb if dropped on United States cities of steel and concrete.

The warplane designer, arguing against "getting hysterical" about the atomic bomb, said he also doubted if it could sink a battleship unless it scored a direct hit.

De Seversky, said he thought the atomic bomb wrought such heavy devastation in Hiroshima and Nagasaki because of their flimsy wood construction.

"If a bomb like that dropped over Hiroshima were dropped over one of our cities," he asserted, "we would lose a lot of glass if the windows weer closed. Chicago would require a great many atomic bombs to do any great deal of damage."

Thus he flew in the face of widespread expert opinion, just as he has in the past by preaching his thesis that huge fiets of long-distance bombers could make armies and navies obsolete.

De Seversky said the atomic bombs as far as he could learn started no fires in the two Japanese cities, but that the fires broke out from stoves and gas leaks after the mighty blast leveled homes and buildings.

For that reason, he continued, he remained unconvinced that the atomic bomb could displace "incendiaries and high explosives if we are going to tackle well-prepared cities with concrete structures."

Leopold Denies Friendliness With Hitler

Brussels, Nov. 2 (AP).—King Leopold today described as inaccurate a report declaring he was on cordial terms with Hitler at a meeting five years ago, and had thanked Hitler for "personal favors" including the return of Leopold's children from Spain.

The report, a 2000-word document, released today by Premier Achille van Acker, was an account prepared by Paul Schmidt, Hitler's interpreter at the Berchtesgaden meeting in November, 1940.

Leopold, in a letter released simultaneously, charged that Schmidt attributed to him phrases uttered by Hitler, and declared "a sentence in which I am alleged to have spoken of an eventual collaboration between Belgium and Germany is entirely false."

"Political Negotiations" Denied

Leopold denied he entered "into any political negotiations" with Hitler, or had made any promises to him, and said he went to Berchtesgaden only "to negotiate the release of our prisoners of war, to improve our food rations, and lighten the economic and financial burden" imposed on Belgium.

Schmidt's rpeort said the interview was "most cordial" and that Leopold had thanked Hitler "for all he had done for Belgium and expressed his gratitude for all the personal favors accorded him, especially for allowing his children to return from Spain."

While anti-Leopoldists considered the document as proof Leopold had had political negotiations with Hitler in order to safeguard his dynasty, many Belgians said they attached little or no significance to the report, describing it as the "German version."

U. S. Troops Seized Document

The Schmidt document was captured by American troops, and turned over to Van Acker's government.

For months there has been a political battle over whether Leopold should be allowed to return to Belgium. The King now is living in Switzerland.

Leopold's letter, addressed to his private secretary, Jacques Pirenne, said Schmidt's report was not a verbatim text, and declared that Former U. S. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles once had remarked that notes attributed to Schmidt were not always accurate.

Luce to Change DAR Members Over Scott Ban

Representative Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn.) announced yesterday she would transfer her membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution from the Putnam Hill Chapter in Greenwich, Conn.

The Greenwich Chapter, which Mrs. Luce joined four years ago, voted overwhelmingly Thursday to approve the action o fthe national DAR in refusing use of Constitution Hall to Hazel Scott, Negro pianist.

She said this decision "leaves me no recourse but to seek to transfer my membership to a chapter which, by its forthright protest against discrimination, has identified itself with the best traditions of the United States and of the DAR."

She said she understood that the Stamford (Conn.) Chapter would protest the discrimination, November 20, and if that were true, she will seek a transfer to this chapter.

Simultaneously, Mrs. Grace L. H. Brosseau of Greenwich, DAR honorary president general, charged the Congresswoman with violating "all of the canons of ethics and good faith" in giving to the press only portions of her "friendly and personal letter" on the Hazel Scott issue.

Va. Architects Hit Navy Plan For St. John's

A resolution protesting the Navy's plan to take over St. John's College has been sent to Congress and President Truman by the Virginia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

Charles A. Pearson, jr., secretary of the chapter, said yesterday the protest was filed because the proposal, which calls for the destruction of the school, would "deprive the Nation of one of its most notable cultural and architectural monuments."

The resolution also said that the proposal was not founded on real necessity, nor was it "the results of competent establishment of design requirements."

Darden Urges More Interest In Va. Election

Wise, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Touching only slightly on the Democratic Party interests in the current political campaign, Governor Darden addressed a mass meeting of Wise County Democrats this afternoon, urging them to take more interest in elections.

The Governor is on a speaking tour in behalf of the candidacies of the Democratic candidates, Lieut. Gov. William M. Tuck, for Governor; L. Preston Collins, for lieutenant governor, and Abram P. Staples, incumbent, for attorney general.

Mr. Darden warned today that unless the citizens take more interest in the election of public officials "we are in danger of losing the liberties for which our boys have fought so magnificently in every quarter of the globe.

"Fewer people than ever before are governing themselves," the Governor said. "Since 1914 when we started the other war, there has been a drifting trend toward the authorization system of government. Our democratic system cannot last unless we take more interest in it. Our fighting men fought to protect a system which we are allowing to die."

The Governor made reference to the recent municipal elections in Norfolk County where he said only between 5000 and 6000 voters went to the polls. "And the worst part of it is that those who don't take the time or interest to vote are the first to criticize those who are elected to office."

Landreth in Home Area

Galax, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Senator S. Floyd Landreth, Republican candidate for Governor, came home yesterday to receive a huge welcome from voters of Carroll and Grayson County.

Making his seventy-sixth address, Landreth reviewed his own record as an office holder and citizen and criticized the record of his opponent, William M. Tuck, declaring that the Democratic nominee has fostered nothing constructive in his 32 years of service in the General Assembly and is holding true to form by making a race for office without a platform.

His interest in improvement of schools is not academic, but comes from experience, Landreth said. He told of attending a one-room school as a child. Later he went to a teacher training school, and following graduation, taught for three years before going to Washington and Lee to study law.

"I hope the voters will study my qualifications and forget party labels and prejudices next Tuesday," he said.

Street Lights Badly Damaged On Halloween

Halloween vandals inflicted "heavy damage" to the city's street lights, Walter E. Kern, District electrical engineer, reported yesterday.

Kern said the power company is making a survey of the damage and that a report will be made in several days.

Between 7 a. m. Wednesday and 7 a. m. yesterday, there were 113 fire alarms, 66 of which were classified as false.

However, Police Inspector Harvey G. Callahan said that everything considered the celebration was very moderate, with damage considerably less than last year.

Milk Shortage In Delaware Area

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 2 (AP).—A milk shortage—seasonal but more serious than usual—was reported today in the Dalmarva Peninsula.

Two leading Salisbury distributors, reporting results of a survey, estimated that a 30 to 50 per cent shortage in milk supply had developed.

Russell Moore, operator of Homestead Dairy Products, and L. F. Vollmer, coowner of City Dairy, said that some distributors had curtailed bulk deliveries to stores, prisoner of war and labor camps from 10 per cent to complete elimination.

They agreed there had been no serious interruption of home deliveries and said the current situation might last for several weeks.

It was explained that the changeover from summer to winter feeding always means a curtailment of dairy output.

In addition, the wartime factors of increased slaughtering with a consequent slump in breeding also contributed to the present situation.

Bendix Radio to Buy Towson Plant From DPC

Towson, Md., Nov. 2 (AP).—Bendix radio division of the Bendix Avaition Corp. will buy its Towson plant from the Defense Plant Corp. for approximately $1,700,000 and add half a million dollars' worth of improvements, W. P. Hillard, general manager, said today.

Announcing that Bendix was in Baltimore to stay, Willard said all the radio division's activities would be concentrated in this plant, which will cover 310,000 square feet of floor space. He said the plant would employe about 2200 persons as soon as the company has completed its reconversion. This is more than three times the company'se prewar employment peak.

Holtzman of Mount Jackson as a member of the Shenandoah County Board of Supervisors from Ashby District to fill the two-year unexpired term of the late J. William Garber. The latter died recently following a long illness.

Resting After Four Years of Feverish Activity

AFTERMATH OF WAR—The giant cranes are motionless at the huge Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard in Baltimore, where the end of the war brought a quick slowdown in activity. A lone worker walks to the long line of ways, where thousands of employes used to help forge a "bridge of ships." Most of the former workers have turned to their peacetime occupations. The yard turned out more vessels during the war period than any other civilian yard in the Nation

Oil Promoter Gets One Year, $10,000 Fine

Baltimore, Nov. 2 (AP).—Frank V. Raymond, 55, of Pompton, N. J., was sentenced to a year and a day imprisonment and fined $10,000 in Federal Court today after admitting to a fraudulent plan involving the sale and development of Pensylvania oil lands. Raymond was also charged with, and pleaded guilty to, using the U. S. mails to defraud, and conspiring to violate the Securities and Exchange Act.

E. R. Kelly, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, special assistant to U. S. Attorney Bernard J. Flynn, claimed Raymond sold deeds to Venango County oil lands to numerous investors under promise of returns following repressuring operations which would render them productive again.

Kelly told Judge W. Calvin Chesnut the plan cost the investors some $70,000. About $22,000 of this money, he charged, Raymond employed for personal use.

When investors inspected oil lands which, under the plan, they were to buy and then lease to Raymond for development, they were shown wells and properties belonging to other interests, the Government said.

An arbitrary return was given to some investors, the Government asserted, and it was not made clear whether these sums were proceeds from oil returns or merely a return from the original investments.

Va. Industrialists Hear Plea For Tax Cut, Balanced Budget

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Twin national problems of taxation and labor relations were discussed and analyzed by speakers at today's opening session of the twenty-fourth annual two-day meeting of the Virginia Manufacturers Association here.

Declaring that "it is not inconsistent to urge maximum tax reduction at this time and also to indorse a balanced budget," H. E. Humphreys, jr., vice president of the United States Rubber Co. and chairman of the finance committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, said:

"Reasonable rates will balance the budget faster. The budget could not be balanced during the war period, even with unprecedented tax burdens, and it is poor policy to attempt arbitrary balancing in this period of reconversion. By a short-sighted policy, which would confiscate about 50 per cent of our national income, we could balance the budget right now. But that would be eating the seed corn at the expense of the harvest of the coming years.

"High rates in themselves," Humphreys continued, "discourage the flow of taxes into the Treasury. . . . The best protection 85,000 Government bondholders can get is tax revision which gives maximum encouragement to private enterprise and private jobs. Present relief is an investment in the future and an investment to increase ultimate tax revenue. This is the time for bold, courageous investment in America."

Representative Mike Monroney, Congressman from the Fifth Oklahoma Congressional District, spoke on "Labor Relations," in the absence of Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota, who had been scheduled but who notified the association today that an important senatorial committee meeting in Washington kept him from being present.

The Congressman, who was also the principal speaker at tonight's dinner meeting, discussed the Ball-Burton-Hatch bill, of which Senator Ball is one of the sponsors, and which is intended to apply a system of arbitration similar to that established by the Railway Mediation Board in all important labor strikes. He also outlined provisions of his own bill, HR 2121, which was introduced, he said, to amend the National Antitrust Act, "to include abuses in restraint of trade as practiced by some few union leaders."

10 Children Hurt As Truck Crashes Into School Bus

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Ten children were injured this morning, four of them requiring hospitalization, when a truck crashed into a school bus on the Bent Mountain road.

Six other children were given first aid treatment.

According to witnesses to the accident, the truck loaded with crushed stone, was going west on Bent Mountain road when it collided with the left rear side of a coupe going in the same direction and then swung out of control and ploughed into the left front side of the school bus, just behind the drivers' seat.

Speaking to members of the general staff and battalion commanders, General Reckord said the "Governor must have a military force at his disposal in order to guarantee the security of every community and the State."

He explained that all the old National Guard units would not be back in Maryland and reorganized for many months to come, and for that reason the State Guard must carry on during the interim.

WLB Dissent Snags Virginia Transit Pact

Richmond, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Settlement of the wage dispute between the management of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. and locals of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, AFL, in Richmond, Norfolk and Portsmouth, is not expected before another week.

The War Labor Board in Atlanta today held an executive session to consider an interpretation of the retroactive pay clause in the national WLB order of October 12, but one of the members dissented. Under procedure, the member is granted seven days in which to prepare his dissent, which would defer the ruling over the much-disputed clause by at least a week, and possibly longer.

Night operators of the Virginia Transit and Portsmouth Transit companies yesterday accepted the plan worked out by labor and management and day workers are expected to concur in the decision, thus averting the threat of a transportation strike in the three cities.

The two transit companies accepted the union interpretation of the retroactive pay clause in the national WLB order and agreed to pay the 5-cent hourly increase, as well as overtime and vacation pay, retroactive to December 29, 1944, and April 1, 1945, respectively, the dates on which the two companies bought the utilities from Vepco.

Vepco officials yesterday also signed an agreement with union officials whereby the company agreed to pay the 5-cent hourly increase retroactive to June 7, 1944, and further agreed to pay the retroactive overtime and vacation pay should the Atlanta WPB rule accordingly.

20% Cut in Md. Spud Planting Recommended

College Park, Md., Nov. 2 (AP).—A 20 per cent cut in the 1946 spring potato planting is suggested by lessened Government demands for this commodity and a carry-over of the 1945 crop. State chairman Joseph H. B. Landford of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, said today.

The early acreage should be around 4700 acres, compared with the 1945 planting of 5900 acres and the 10-year average of 5500 acres, Blandford explained.

"Adjustment of the 1946 crop to expected market demands will help the growers in the next harvest season," the chairman explained.

He said a State meeting is planned this month to consider prospective acreages of other crops. Blandford added:

"After the goals have been suggested with an eye to prospective markets in 1946, by the meeting of representative producers with the AAA and other agricultural officians, they will be passed on to farmers as a guide for balancing production with market demand."

Major Payne is a native of Campbell, this county, where her mother, Mrs. Winston Payne, resides. She attended the Washington School for Secretaries at Washington, D. C., before coming to the University of Virginia Hospital.

Charlottesville Ready to Call For Dam Bids

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 2 (Spl.). Bid invitation specifications for the construction of the city's $500,000 water supply dam on Moorman's River have been drafted into final form and city council is expected to ask at its meeting Monday for estimates on construction of the approximately 80-foot structure, city officials announced today.

Plans and specifications for the dam, estimated to impound about 430 million gallons of water, have been drafted by E. W. Saunders, consulting engineer, and F. W. Wheeler, designing engineer, both of Charlottesville, and have been included in detail in a 100-page mimeographed booklet which will be provided contractors desiring to enter bids on the project.

According to plans, council will ask for bids on the project with an award date set probably in December. Mayor Roscoe Adams said today that work on the project will probably start soon after the first of the year, provided the bids are within reason.

The dam will be erected near the present city intake dam on Moorman's River, near the edge of the Shenandoah National Park. The dam itself will be about 80 feet in height from solid bedrock, or about 65 feet above the natural bed of the stream.

It will be a curved concrete structure of the gravity type, with a 225-foot spillway and a total length across the top of 500 feet. The storage capacity is estimated at about 430 million gallons, with a top surface of about 44 acres. An alternate plan calls for the erection of a 5-foot flood gate on top of the dam which would increase the storage capacity of the project. Coffer dams will be erected to divert the stream while the large structure is being erected, but the city's supply of water from the river will remain unimpaired.

Meeting at the Hillel Foundation, the B'nai B'rith convention will include business sessions tomorrow night and Sunday morning, and conclude with a banquet at 1:30 Sunday afternoon at the Monticello Hotel.

A traditional ceremony—presentation of the Torah, a sacred scroll—will be included in the dedication.

Mr. Wallace's Horoscope

Secretary of Commerce Wallace has issued a report dealing with wages and profits in the automobile industry that will simply add to the flames of current wage controversy. Except for purposes of political propaganda, there is no excuse for publishing a document of this description bristling with hypotheses and unverifiable assumptions. It is designed to prove that the automobile industry could increase basic wage rates 25 per cent by 1947 without raising prices and yet continue to make high profits. To reach these conclusions Mr. Wallace's statisticians have had to do a lot of guessing about future conditions—what they are likely to be in the next two or three years as regards increases in productivity and in material costs, volume of sales and other factors affecting future profits. "Even with a 25 per cent wage increase and some increase in material costs," according to the report, "profits three times larger than in the 1936-39 period can be expected on sales 2½ times as large" in 1947 and 1948 on the basis of 1942 prices.

As was to have been expected, spokesmen for the automobile industry dispute the validity of the department's estimates and protest its conclusions. President Wilson of General Motors says that his company would have to increase its volume of production by 60 per cent over 1936-39 in order to make as much money as it did during that period, under OPA price formulas, without any wage increases whatever. And the general manager of the Automobile Manufacturers Association declares that labor efficiency in the industry is currently 20 to 40 per cent below prewar levels. This clash of opinion again emphasizes the need for labor and management to get together and settle their differences by means of an impartial fact-finding analysis of the position of the individual automobile companies involved in wage disputes. It is certainly not the business of the Department of Commerce to prejudge the issues at stake in pending wage controversies by resort to sweeping conclusions based on assumptions open to challenge.

Furthermore, the Department of Commerce study seems to take it for granted that if an industry is able to meet wage increases out of profits, the case for higher wages has been proved. In the present instance, however, the question should be raised as to whether all these prospective profits of the automobile industry belong of right to the automobile workers. Why should they be the sole beneficiaries of technological progress and reduced production costs? Under a progressive free economic system, the gains from industrial progress should be shared by all workers as consumers. Sharing is accomplished by lowering prices. This is the way to stimulate expansion and create jobs. Moreover, the man who has invested his savings in an industry is also entitled to a share in the rewards of progress. If all future profit increases are skimmed off by wage increases, the incentive to effect economies and expand markets by lowering prices will be greatly weakened, if not killed. These larger issues involved in current demands for wage increases have been almost lost to sight owing to the statistical bombardments to which we have been subjected. Yet they are of fundamental importance to the preservation of a sound, progressive, private business economy.

Tax Cuts

Senator Taft extracts a modicum of comfort from the fact that the new tax law lops only one billion dollars off receipts during the current fiscal year. That reduction comes from the lowering of individual income taxes beginning next January. Most of the cuts, amounting to nearly six billion dollars, represent reductions in 1946 tax liabilities, not payable until a later date. So Senator Taft is entitled to such slight consolation as he can derive from his knowledge that the estimated 30-billion-dollar deficit for the fiscal year 1946 will not be greatly swollen by the new tax legislation.

We fail to see, however, why Mr. Taft should suggest the need for further cuts in personal income taxes and in excises next year, not to exceed five billion dollars. He is, no doubt, right in arguing that a measure of corporate tax relief was immediately required to encourage business to expand and plan for reconversion. But there is no such pressure to lower excises on luxury goods or to provide more tax relief for individuals. We have already given individual relief too hastily in view of the unbalanced state of the budget. Further cuts should be postponed until expenditures have been reduced to a point at which we can really begin to hope for attainment of budgetary balance.

Unrest In Germany

General Eisenhower's fears that the increasing resentment against Allied rule by the German population may presently take the form of organized uprisings seems a fairly logical consequence of the lack of any real agreement on policy among the victorious nations. It also reflects the uncertainty here at home, and probably also in Britain, as to whether the primary purpose of the occupation is punitive or reconstructive.

The directive order issued to General Eisenhower last April, but only lately made public, certainly emphasized the punitive aspects of his job. He is obliged, for example, to make certain that the standard of living in Germany is at best no higher "than that existing in any one of the neighboring United Nations." According to General Eisenhower, 60 per cent of the German population is on a diet below the subsistence level, though an extensive black market in food seems to be operating. General Eisenhower was also instructed to "insure that prisoners of war and displaced persons are cared for and repatriated," yet one of the general's greatest headaches is the presence of more than a half million "displaced persons," mostly Poles and Hungarians, who are presumably none too eager to be repatriated. The general has also the problem of former German soldiers returning from the prison camps to find that no way of making a living is open to them, and highly indignant to discover German women folk fraternizing with the well-fed Americans. Something like the Freikorps spirit of 1918-19 appears, in consequence, to be reviving.

Meanwhile, the decentralization of German industry as prescribed in the directive order and the "economic disarmament program" agreed on at Potsdam, appears to have been proceeding in the American zone, though apparently not rapidly enough to satisfy the Russians. Several large plants which have been declared to be in excess of what is necessary to the German economy are being dismantled for shipment, though apparently it has not yet been decided whither they are to be shipped. Another article of the directive order defines as one of the objectives of the occupation "the eventual reconstruction of German political life on a democratic basis." General Eisenhower, however, observes dryly that a long occupation will be necessary to overcome the German apathy toward "democratic processes and responsibilities." Thus far the Germans have used their democratic freedom merely to become "bolder in their criticism of the government." According to a dispatch by Mr. Drew Middleton to the New York Times, the anti-Nazi leaders in Germany have become apprehensive about the effort to try the prisoners at Nuremberg on a law improvised to suit the charges, fearing that the trials may produce an unfavorable reaction among a people who are still convinced that the real origins of the war were contained in the Treaty of Versailles.

Thus General Eisenhower's desire to have the responsibility for the internal government of Germany turned over to the civil authority as soon as possible is fully understandable. The increasing difficulties of the military government in Germany are not of General Eisenhower's making. They have several origins. One is the superstition that rigid formulas, based on political theory rather than reality, can be applied in a highly confused and fluid situation. Another is the unanimity rule whereby all the delegates of the powers are bound to agree before policy decisions in Berlin can be taken. A third is the diversity of approach of the powers, which, incidentally, include a country that was not party to the Potsdam agreement, namely, France. General Eisenhower's report shows the necessity of a fresh meeting of minds on the technique of administration as well as a policy, so that, without damage to the main purpose of insuring the permanent demilitarization of Germany, there shall be a speeding up of decisions and a flexibility in carrying them out.

Exonerating Mr. Hull

The Army Pearl Harbor Board impliedly criticized former Secretary Hull's role in the period preceding the Japanese attack of December 7, 1941. The position taken by the board was that Mr. Hull should have prolonged his negotiations with Messrs. Nomura and Kurusu instead of handing them a note on November 26, 1941, which made all further discussions impossible. "It seems well established," said the Army Board's report, "that the sending of this '10-point' memorandum by the Secretary of State was used by the Japanese as a signal for starting the war by the attack on Pearl Harbor."

At the time the report was issued both Secretary of War Stimson and President Truman came to Mr. Hull's defense, as did this newspaper. Evidence that was not available then has now been forthcoming to show that the Army Board were drawing conclusions on the basis of incomplete and inadequate evidence. Indeed, it shows conclusively not only that Mr. Hull's note of November 26, 1941, had no effect whatever on Japan's course of action but also that Pearl Harbor would have occurred even had he managed to prolong his talks with Messrs. Nomura and Kurusu.

This evidence was first made public by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal in his Navy Day speech. In the sunken Japanese heavy cruiser, Nachi, Mr. Forrestal has revealed, documents were found which showed that orders for the attack on Pearl Harbor were secretly communicated to the Japanese fleet as early as November 5, 1941. The only omission in these plans was the date of the attack. That date was specified in a subsequent, ultra-secret document dated November 7, 1941, 19 days before Mr. Hull's note. This order from Japanese imperial headquarters contained precise instructions to the task force commanders for the launching of the assault on Pearl Harbor. The attack was set for December 8, Japanese time (December 7 our time).

Discussing this matter at a recent press conference, Secretary Byrnes expressed the hope that the Japanese documents "may forever dispose of the claims of the Army Board that the so-called ultimatum of Secretary Hull started the Japanese war." By the same token it is evident that, given its present inadequacies, the reports both of the Army Board and of the Navy Board should be supplemented by a further investigation. This was clearly the intent of Congress. Thus far, however, the Barkley Committee which was named to look into the matter has been conspicuous only by its inactivity, at least to outward seeming.

Relief And Politics

The Brown amendment which the House on Thursday tacked onto the UNRRA appropriation is at once a mischievous irrelevancy and an administrative absurdity. It pretends to assure freedom to American newspapermen in countries where UNRRA operates. Press freedom is, of course, a laudable goal. And espousal of it, like espousal of the sanctity of American motherhood, seems an easy avenue to political glorification. It has nothing to do, however, with the filling of bellies which crave not news but food. We do not believe that the House Republicans were prudent, or even politic, in making a party issue of this specious amendment. They have laid themselves open to the ugly charge of playing politics with relief.

The Brown amendment has to be read to be believed. It provides that none of the funds appropriated "shall be furnished to or used in any country of which the controlling government . . . maintains any barrier—technical, political, legal, or economic—to obtaining, dispatching and disseminating the news . . ." Such barriers, wherever they exist, are lamentable. But the fact is that they do exist and are certain to be continued to some extent in a number of the countries which have undergone recent political upheavals. The people who live in those countries may be no less hungry, however, than the people in countries adhering more closely to our own concepts of press freedom.

In point of fact, every country maintains some barriers to obtaining news. Newspapermen were excluded, for example, from the executive session of the House Appropriations Committee which acted on the UNRRA request for funds. A literal interpretation of the Brown amendment would mean, therefore, that not even the United States would be eligible for UNRRA aid. General Eisenhower necessarily maintains certain barriers to dispatching news from Germany; the Brown amendment would make it impossible, therefore, for UNRRA to give assistance to the displaced persons now inside the Reich. The Russians—at whom the Brown amendment is patently aimed—are not going to be forced into an abandonment of their deplorable censorship by this sort of blackmail; all that we can get out of such tactics is a further deterioration of our relations with them.

The Republican Congressional Food Study Committee reported just a few days ago that "the $550,000,000 remaining to complete the current contribution of the United States toward UNRRA's operating expenses should be made available immediately. This is a national obligation. It is unthinkable that the United States should now default on the commitments it has made to UNRRA and which UNRRA in turn has made, in reliance upon us, to the people of the liberated countries of Europe." We cannot now impose a special condition upon our contribution to UNRRA without just such an unthinkable default on our commitments. The Brown amendment imposes a condition which is, in any case, impossible of fulfillment and which, if enforced, will condemn millions to hunger. UNRRA was established not for the purpose of opening foreign doors to American newspapermen but for the simple, humanitarian purpose of getting food to starving human beings. We hope the Senate will have a better sense of values.

THE LOOK OF STARS

You were there last night and the night before
Quiet, beneficent, and calm,
And the night I was born, and many more
Over our hillside farm.

But only tonight when staring out
From a darkened window, did I see
How many you were, and all about
There over me.

And whether I gained or whether I lost
This night, before I had come to lie
In grief and alone, and darkness tossed,
Until I die

I shall remember the look of stars
Beyond the night of my window pane
And so become accustomed to loss
And so be humble for knowing gain.

Washington Calling

Nagasaki Eyewitness

ONE OF THE ATOM bomb scientists, trying to convey to a congressional committee something of what the discovery means to mankind, suddenly paused with a kind of humorous despair. It was so difficult, he said, to give any idea of what the new force could do unless you had seen the destruction it had wrought.

The other day, a father here in Washington received a letter from his 20-year-old son in the service just after the boy had been on a sightseeing tour of the bombed area at Nagasaki. Because it conveys the sense of destructiveness with greater power than anything in print thus far, here are the descriptive passages of the letter.

"Well, now I've seen it! I've seen what very few men who have fought in this war will ever see; I've seen that which is, in reality, merely a preview of 'that which is to come.' What I saw was 'here,' the atomic bomb hit in the city of Nagasaki—or rather, what would be a city.

"WE STARTED OUT in our trucks and soon reached the area, although it's quite difficult to discern where the actual range of the explosion started, because everything is too messed up. And now I am practically at a loss to try to describe it to you.

"For an area of 3 square miles, approximately, virtually everything was flattened. It wasn't razed as Berlin was, with its walls charred and having empty windows, for those walls were still standing. This was flat. Here and there you could see a battered barber chair, a bicycle frame bent double, a skull and some bones, a teapot, a steel helmet, rubbish, wreckage, junk—all this in a section at one time more densely populated and with narrower streets than F st. in Washington.

"As we rode block after block, mile after mile, I found that I became more and more incredulous that all this was done by a bomb, one bomb weighing but 40 pounds. Webster, complete as he is, has not one word which even comes close to describing it. Chaos, shambles, havoc, devastation, utter waste—they all seem so insignificant when applied to this. It is the kind of thing you have to actually see with your own eyes to actually believe it and, even then, you don't really 'get it.' It seems so impossible, and yet it's there.

"As we drove along the narrow, dirty roads with water-filled ruts, once their Constitution ave. or Pennsylvania ave., we saw lots of differently dressed Japanese women and children . . . They gazed at us with burning hatred—never have I seen such expressions: with a kind of dumb bewilderment, or with a gaze of one looking through something.

"As to what I felt, what emotions I experienced as I drove down the streets of Nagasaki in the early morning sunlight, it is hard to put into words. You see the utter desolation, the devastation, the chaos; but as you continue, block after block, it begins to seem utterly impossible that one bomb of only 40 pounds could have done all this, and as you travel further this incredulity grows . . . even though you see it with your own eyes, you tend to fail to believe or even to comprehend it.

"YET WHILE THIS feeling of disbelief steadily grows, there is in the back of your mind, mine at least, a voice, a realization which seems to hammer home—'if only 40 pounds of that stuff can do this, what would be the result of a mere thousand pounds?' As I say, even seeing it, one tends to evade the actual realization, tends to shake his head, muttering, 'nope, nope, it can't be!' Yet how can you avoid facing that which is fact, pure, simple and all too real!

"To put down a final word on Nagasaki: Not many fellows who fought in the war will see what I have seen; a sight which is in reality merely a sneak preview, an infinitesimal demonstration of a 'thing' which can mean either life or death for our entire civilization. That may sound dramatic, but so are the miles of havoc, chaos, devastation it wrought."

That is the reaction of an average young American. Even as he saw it, he wanted to disbelieve. It was too unreal, too terrible.

Yet we cannot shut our eyes. Why shouldn't the special Senate committee named to study atomic energy visit Nagasaki and Hiroshima? They might learn more on the spot than from the second-hand accounts of a thousand witnesses.

Wage Increases

People in the lower and lower-middle income brackets represent the overwhelming majority of Americans, whose postwar plans of comfortable American standard of living are threatened today by wage cuts and unemployment. A program for 15 per cent wage increases is considerably short of what the country needs, but it's a step in the right direction.

Congress and OPA must realize that we expect a program for greater purchasing power—now. That means a rise in earnings, no rise in basic prices.

Bridge To Russia

By Barnet Nover

Secretary Byrnes On Regionalism

IN HIS ADDRESS before the New York Herald Tribune Forum, Secretary Byrnes gave the clearest and most convincing exposition of the American view on regionalism yet made by any spokesman for the United States.

His remarks will be read with great interest and, no doubt, with considerable approval in the region south of the Rio Grande. However, the Secretary's speech was intended not so much for Latin-American as for Russian consumption.

Our relations with Russia today are in a dangerously critical state. As long as the war was still going on, differences between the two countries were overshadowed by the imperative need of keeping the ranks closed against the common enemy. Since victory, the two nations have more and more tended to drift apart.

THIS HAS notably been true with regard to the situation in central and eastern Europe.

There Russia has set up a series of puppet governments subject to Moscow's political and economic dictation. At best, American representatives, including press correspondents, have been tolerated in those countries but never welcomed and certainly not given any facilities for the carrying out of their missions.

Half a year after VE-Day, Europe east of the Oder and the Adriatic remains cut off from the rest of the Continent, a closed area forming part of Russia's sphere of influence.

IT IS TO THIS circumstance and the growing irritations to which it has given rise both in this country and in Great Britain that Mr. Byrnes addressed himself.

His speech was conciliatory and diplomatic. The Secretary of State made it clear that, however much we may object to certain policies pursued by Russia in eastern Europe and the Balkans, we do not object to Russia's basic aims in that region, at least insofar as Russia has publicly proclaimed them.

Those aims are two in number. First, Russia insists that no government be set up along her western borders that is hostile to the Soviet Union. Second, Russia is determined that those border states should not become the spearpoint of a new attack on her from the west.

These aims, said Mr. Byrnes, the United States fully supports. "We are fully aware," he said, "of her (Russia's) special security interests in those countries and we have recognized those interests in the arrangements made for the occupation and control of the former enemy states.

"We can appreciate the determination of the people of the Soviet Union that never again will they tolerate the pursuit of policies in those countries deliberately directed against the Soviet Union's security and her way of life."

Mr. Byrnes then gave this explicit assurance to Russia:

"America will never join any groups in those countries in hostile intrigue against the Soviet Union."

THE SECRETARY of State made it clear, however, that the kind of regionalism we are prepared to approve and support in central and eastern Europe cannot be one involving spheres of exclusive influence and special privilege for Russia.

That is not the kind of regionalism we believe in. Nor is it the kind we practice in this hemisphere. Mr. Byrnes admitted that the principles of the good neighbor had not always been observed by the United States in its relations with neighboring lands. But, he added, "we have learned by experience that to have good neighbors we must be a good neighbor."

Regionalism in central and eastern Europe, he made clear, cannot differ from regionalism anywhere else. It must include the principle of nonintervention in the domestic affairs of the nations within the region. Each people must be free to chose their own government. Nor can the region divorce itself from the rest of the world.

"We have learned," said Mr. Byrnes, "that our security interests in this hemisphere do not require its isolation from economic and cultural relations with the rest of the world." And he added, significantly:

"We live in one world, and in this atomic age regional isolationism is even more dangerous than is national isolationism."

SECRETARY BYRNES' speech was at once an admonition to Russia and also an olive branch. It was a reminder to the Kremlin that we are not prepared actively or by default to accept as a permanent fact the establishment by Russia of a closed sphere of interest in central and eastern Europe. But it was also an expression of American support of Russia's legitimate interests in that region.

The next move is up to Russia. If she accepts the olive branch and acts accordingly, an improvement in Russian-American relations should be easy of attainment. If, on the other hand, she continues her present policies and practices in central and eastern Europe, Russian-American tensions are certain to increase rather than diminish, with consequences that are not likely to be pleasant either for Russia or anyone else.

"Today," said Mr. Byrnes, "the world must take its choice. There must be one world for all of us or there will be no world for any of us."

That is the choice confronting Russia, too.

Military Unification

Some participants in the discussion of unification of our military service seem to overlook one of the basic facts of World War II, that air power with ground support is a more effective force than land power with air support.

The Germans made that mistake to some extent and the Japs made it to a greater extent. As soon as we were able to raise an all-enveloping air force which could hit the enemy everywhere from the front lines to the factories, the jig was up for him. The naval and ground forces were indispensable in launching the air attack by gaining and holding bases ever closer to the enemy homeland, but the Sunday punch that cut down his ability to make war came from the air.

Under the World War I concept, separate command for land and sea forces was logical and adequate. Each had its own air support, in those days largely observation, and the liaison problem when forces struck out from land to sea and vice versa was fairly simple.

Apply that to modern war and you have a situation comparable to a fighter with the muscle nerves to one leg partially disconnected from his brain. His arms of air power have one leg of land power well coordinated, but the other leg of sea power sometimes doesn't "know" when, where and how the next blow will be struck.

The atomic bomb has further confused many people. It wasn't that the Japs had no defense against the bomb. They had no defense against our air attack, land and carrier based. Strategic use of air bombing, not just a more powerful bomb, was the cause of their defeat.

In supporting the present command setup, the observation is at once made that we did all right this time. Very true, but it was against enemies who failed to recognize the full possibilities of modern war. We've got to be absolutely sure if there is a next time. There must be responsibility of command, not just good liaison.

CAPT. AGNEW FISHER.
Washington, Oct. 24.

The armed forces as they stand today have been and always will be the best system, in that it creates a rivalry between the different branches, and this rivalry is the basis on which the constant improvement and development of training advances as the years roll by. A unification of all the services under one command would bring about a dormant stage which would produce a training program with no initiative because of the lack of rivalry.

As a medically discharged veteran of the Marine Corps with 8½ years of service I hope that I never live to see the day that the proposed unification policy is approved. GEORGE PETROFF.

Park's Beauty Begging

My thanks to the "poet" responsible for the brief and beautiful "Park's Beauty Goes Begging on Perfect Day" on the front page on October 29.

I mean—why should I bother with the inevitable Monday morning pots and pans and ash trays? I'm going out! "So much beauty, and for what?" For me! Today!

Just a little while ago a young woman who loved the beauty of the outdoors and felt the lure of Rock Creek started out gaily of a Sunday morning to breathe the sweet, clean air.

Someone lurking in the shadows murdered her.

Fear crept into our hearts then, and it is still with us. No longer may we venture out alone. And so many of us are alone.

Yes, the beauty of Rock Creek is there, begging that we keep it company.

But we dare not seek it because fear has gripped our hearts.

Army Caste System

The G. I.'s have endured the injustices of our military caste system for the duration of the war, always griping and never happy about it, but living with the hope that when the war is over many of these excesses would be done away with. Instead, the caste system flourishes with the same arrogance as it always has. In Shanghai and Calcutta where I have seen it first hand, there isn't a single decent hotel where a G. I. on leave from the Indian jungle can "escape" from the Army for the duration of his leave. The first class hotels, e.g., the Grand and the Great Eastern are "verboten" to the enlisted personnel.

I have spent over three years in the service, nine months overseas, and due to Army "snafu" in their demobilization plans, may have to spend quite a few months more overseas. Can't something be done to make our life more bearable?

District Problems

Home Rule For D. C.

In your editorial of October 17 you suggest that Senator McCarran revise his "home rule" bill to confer more powers on the elective city council which it would set up here. In its present form the bill would permit the council to exercise only such powers as are now possessed by the District Commissioners, except that it may exercise additional powers subject to veto by Congress.

It would, of course, be desirable for the new "home rule" government to have all the powers of a real city government. But is it not possible that the Senator drew his bill in its present form as a matter of expediency? He may have been moved by the same considerations that actuated those who drafted the Capper-Sumners resolution for an amendment to the Constitution to permit representation of the District in Congress and the electoral college.

If that resolution should be passed by Congress and the constitutional amendment ratified by the requisite number of States, we would still not have national representation unless and until Congress should take further action. The backers of the resolution say that it was drafted in this form in order that it might be more acceptable to Congress and the State Legislatures. There is good reason to believe that they are correct in their presumption. Similarly, might not Congress more readily approve legislation for an elective city government for Washington if it does not increase the powers of the local government?

Like yourself I deplore the slow action of Congress with respect to both the McCarran "home rule" bill and the Capper-Sumners resolution. Both should be passed. Either would do as a temporary expedient. But when a powerful organization like the Board of Trade, which supports the Capper-Sumners resolution and opposes the McCarran bill, testifies, as its representative did at the hearings on the McCarran bill, that it would oppose any legislation to set up an elective city government here even if national representation should be achieved, is there not good reason to believe that some of the supporters of national representation are more interested in diverting support from the McCarran bill than they are in giving Washingtonians a vote of any kind? Might this not have something to do with the slow progress of both the McCarran bill and the Capper-Sumners resolution.

D. C. Public Recreation

The second annual report of the Citizens Committee on Race Relations contains several statements that indicate little understanding of the background of public recreation in Washington. As far as I have been able to ascertain, this committee did not seek any information of the staff of the Recreation Department or any white member of the Recreation Board.

The effect of the second report is to create the impression that the Recreation Board made some changes in past policy on June 12. No change whatsoever was made. Supervised units in the recreation plan have always been operated as white or colored units.

There are 6672 acres of park land in the District. Of this huge area the units in the recreation system will require only 360 acres of what is strictly park land—less than 6 per cent of the entire park area. It is only on this 6 per cent that separate programs are conducted for white and colored.

Quoting the report: "It is an unnecessary hardship for white residents of Georgetown when they want to play a set of tennis to have to take a bus to distant courts instead of using the courts conveniently located." This is a particularly broad misstatement of the situation. White citizens of Georgetown have tennis courts available at Montrose Park and at Georgetown Playground.

The Rose Park courts were built as a result of representation to the Recreation Department that tennis courts were badly needed in that section for use by Negroes. Use by white citizens was permitted by Negro employes of the board without knowledge of the superintendent of recreation or of the board and against known rules of the board. The board cannot permit an employe to decide such questions.

Mention is made in the report of the organization of the Citizens Committee Against Segregation in Recreation. This committee was given an extensive hearing by the board, August 11. Almost without exception, the representatives of this committee emphasized that the board had extended a policy of segregation to all recreation areas. This is wholly untrue, and I again reiterate the board has made no change in policy.

The amendment to the regulations proposed by Mrs. Hunter, Negro member of the board, is set forth in the report. While difficult of interpretation as to just what it proposes, according to my understanding of Mrs. Hunter's explanation it would abolish segregation on any unit.

In adopting a set of by-laws, rules and regulations, the board has only proceeded in an orderly manner to complete its organization. Mrs. Hunter objected, not to a continuation of separate programs, but to setting it forth in writing, stating she "thought we could avoid that." As the section was on "administration" and comprises the board's instruction to the Recreation Department as to operation of the system, I, as a board member, saw no reason to dodge the question, and I make no apology for my position.

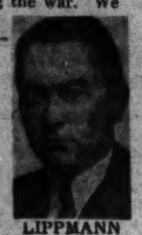
Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

First Things First

IN OUR EFFORT to settle the war we are making the great strategical error which, happily, we avoided in waging the war. We are dispersing our strength on sideshows in the secondary theaters instead of concentrating first of all on the central and primary objective. In Europe, thanks largely to General Marshall, we never lost sight of the fact that the war would be won only when the German army was defeated, and holding fast to that conception we refused to let our forces be diverted to smaller indecisive campaigns in the Balkans and the Near East, however plausible and pressing politically, which did not bring us to grips with the central power of Germany.



LIPPMANN

But since Potsdam, and indeed in considerable degree since Yalta, we have lost sight of the main issue in Europe, which is the German settlement, and have drifted into secondary disputes all around the edges of Europe. We may have been right as rain about such questions as Trieste, the Italian colonies, the Romanian government, and the Bulgarian elections: they were nevertheless not the questions which deserved to come first, and the real reason we got nowhere in settling them is that they cannot be settled until a basic German settlement has been agreed to. Many explanations have been offered for the failure of the London Conference. The true explanation, I submit, is that the London Conference dealt with the wrong subjects. It was like a conference of creditors trying to decide whether John Smith, who has just been through an earthquake, a fire, and a flood, should pay $10.72 to his grocer or $9.36 to his butcher. Among the spectators the ideologists of vegetarianism were hot for paying the grocer.

SURELY IT IS evident that these Balkan and Eastern European questions are subordinate to the German question. How, for example, can there be elections free from foreign influence as long as the Red Army is all over the place? Yet how can the Red Army withdraw from Eastern Europe until there is a German settlement which can be enforced without great unwieldly masses of troops?

How can there be any kind of orderly reconstruction on the continent of Europe until it is settled what Germany is to produce, is to export, and is to import? It is all very well for Mr. Bevin, seconded by Mr. Byrnes, to protest about bilateralism between Hungary and the Soviet Union: but what else can they expect when they have not made up their minds about Germany, which was the chief economic supplier of Central Europe? How would anyone go about reconverting the United States to peace if between the Ohio and the Mississippi no one knew what it was possible and what it was permissible to produce, to buy, and to sell?

GENERAL EISENHOWER wrote to the President on October 26 reminding him of an agreement made last summer under which the Army would be relieved of the duty of governing Germany, the responsibility given to civilians, and the Army confined to its "true function" which is to provide the "reserve force and power" to enforce regulations and policy. It is a striking commentary on how these great matters have been allowed to drift that a soldier should have to remind the civil authority about the true function of an army.

In carrying out the agreement, which the President has reaffirmed, the Administration will need to reconsider radically the whole occupation system. It might well begin by asking itself whether there is any prospect of our being able and willing to continue very much longer to keep several hundred thousand ordinary troops on garrison duty in Germany. The answer is that there is no prospect. The kind of army we have in Germany was not recruited, was not trained, and is inherently unfitted, for garrison duty. It cannot be kept there very much longer: it cannot be effective while it is there if its only interest is to come home. Long before it democratizes the Germans, it will demoralize itself.

THIS WAS FORESEEN and foretold long ago by many among us. The War Department, which was so brilliantly ingenious and resourceful in developing coordinated specialized task forces in the war, has shown no imagination about developing specialized task forces to carry out its mission in Germany. It has just left a combat army composed of young civilians to sit around in Germany waiting for a ship to take them home.

Surely the men who planned the landing in Normandy ought to be able to draw up a plan for a police force which is recruited from men who are prepared to stay in Europe, and paid well for staying, which is trained specially for its mission, which is small and compact enough to be manageable, and to have its own esprit de corps, which is equipped with all the planes, armored vehicles, devices and weapons to move irresistibly and swiftly anywhere in Germany. As an anonymous member of the RAF, writing in this month's Harper's Magazine, puts it, "to apply our force correctly in Germany . . . it is not in the least necessary to have a bored G. I. wandering around the streets of Frankfurt."

WITH SUCH A different type of armed force, a different kind of control of Germany would naturally follow. The control would be based on the principle, not of governing Germany, but of compelling the Germans to bear that unattractive responsibility, of telling them what they may not do within Germany, what they must deliver out of Germany, what they may receive into Germany, and then of arresting, trying, and punishing individual Germans who violate the code.

If we are wise, we shall make it a simple and not an elaborate code. Having disarmed the Germans and demobilized them and destroyed or removed their chief arsenals of war, we should forbid them to train men or to make weapons. There is no use trying to define weapons: that will only invite ingenious evasion. We can easily send a commission to Germany which can tell quite quickly if some new gadget is or is not a weapon.

The rules for German industry should also be simple. It should not be difficult to say what may not be produced at all, and what in broad quotas must be done, what may be done, with the coal, the steel, the electric power, etc. etc., authorized for production. Probably it will be advisable to internationalize the coal production of the Ruhr not, let us hope, by stationing four armies in the Ruhr Valley, but by organizing a public corporation which owns the controlling shares in the coal mines and is itself owned by the allied nations directly concerned with Germany.

WHAT WE must avoid is complexity in our demands and prohibitions and in our methods of control and enforcement. For the system will not last if it is not simple, and the Germans will never learn to govern themselves, or face up to the consequences of aggression, if—in the guise of occupying and reforming them—we relieve them of their responsibility for Germany.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SWARTHMORE, PA.—It's a sure sign of age when you revisit the haunts of your boyhood. But I have been doing just that, and having a glorious time.

I have been re-examining every tree where I ever carved my initials, every bush where I found a bird-nest, the old grapevine where we swung out over Crum Creek, the little stream where we used to catch garter snakes to bring out of shoe boxes during dull moments in Sunday School.

Some of the trees are gone now, and I couldn't find my initials on those which remained. And Doggie Stream, where we caught snakes, is now lined with lovely lawns sloping down from affluent houses; with duck ponds and white painted fences, where there used to be thickets so dense and wild that I once found a lot of silver plate hidden in a hollow log, apparently by a burglar who hadn't had time to get away with his loot.

Ogden's Spring House, where Doggie Stream begins, and where we used to catch frogs and pick watercress, was locked today—the first time I have seen it locked in 30 years. And the watering trough outside, where horses stopped for a drink before going into town, has disappeared.

The dirt road which used to be a sea of mud beside the spring, is now macadamized, and all the stone carriage houses, where those who could afford them kept their horses, have been turned into garages or modernized apartments.

Skunks in Washington

I WALKED ON, BEYOND the spring, beyond the cow pasture on the edge of Baltimore Pike, now studded with very prim and proper houses, on out to Lownes' Run and the open fields and woods where we used to hunt.

There, under a ledge of the stream, I found the same spot where once we had caught a mink. A mink caught within 11 miles of Philadelphia. It is hard to believe, but there, one day in February, we found the bank of the stream literally chewed to pieces where the mink, caught in our trap, had struggled but lost the battle. It was dead and frozen when we arrived.

Today, in the autumn sunshine, the bank of the stream was just the same, except that now, more than 30 years later, it bore no scars of battle.

Most of the time, however, we were not lucky enough to catch mink. We trapped skunk. We shipped the skins to Funsten Brothers in St. Louis and one winter we managed to make $15. In those days it seemed like a lot of money.

I got so I could skin a skunk before breakfast, and although I used the cook's perfume to counteract the odor, my mother, a most patient woman, sometimes complained about it. I never was quite sure whether it was the perfume from the skunk or the cook she disliked most.

Once, also, with the help of my father's razor, I amputated the vital organs of a skunk, put them in a shaving-soap box and thence behind the radiator in the classroom of an unpopular English teacher. It broke up all classes in that room for the day.

The teacher's name was Truman—as far as I know, no relation to the present incumbent of the White House.

Critics who write me today complaining about my man-handling of the king's English will, I trust, now be more sympathetic.

In Washington it has been a matter of some debate as to whether I was still hunting skunks or whether I, in turn, should be hunted.

Progress Invades

TODAY AN ELECTRIC railway runs through our old trapping grounds, connecting Philadelphia with its suburbs. I remember how valiantly and persistently our trapping club fought that unwanted invader of our primitive countryside. When the surveyors for the electric line laid out their stakes, we pulled up every one of them. Time after time they resurveyed that line, only to wake up next morning to find their stakes gone.

But it was no use. Twelve-year-old boys could not stop modern progress.

Today I passed the grey-stone residence now used to house the president of Swarthmore College. It looked stern, sedate and solemn. But I remember the day when rank weeds grew on its deserted lawn, dense bushes surrounded it, a Robin Hood band, in which I played Little John, crept in and out of its broken windows.

Came the day when Robin Hood's "headquarters" found itself squarely in the path of modern civilization. The college purchased the old mansion and started to install new windows, electricity, and a furnace. Again we did our best to block the creeping paralysis of progress. Every weekend we ripped out the electric wiring, and hid the carpenters' tools. But it did no good. How could 12-year-olds fight the adult machinery of a college? We lost.

And every time the college now approaches me as one of its notorious, if not distinguished, alumni, and asks me to add to its endowment fund, I always figure, as I write a check, that I'm helping to pay for that electric wiring I ripped out of the president's mansion.

Pearson and Progress

SO DESPITE ALL I could do to prevent it, the town of Swarthmore today is one of the most modern and beautiful I have ever seen. Its streets are better; its schools are beter equipped; its children better educated; and its people more intelligent. Finally, they don't have the pungent odor of a certain woodland animal wafting over the town from the Pearson woodshed on winter mornings.

Yes, the town is improved a lot—despite all I could do to stop it. Which only goes to show that you can't halt progress. You can't prevent the development of atomic energy, whether in the USA or the USSR.

It was the professors who turned the tide of this war—professors plus the factories which produced the airplanes, the tanks, the artillery, the ships, the radar and the atom bombs. We had big armies in 1942. But they were fighting bare-handed or with out-of-date tanks, guns and airplanes—until the factories and the professors and the industrial geniuses of the Nation got going.

Many soldiers were trained and sent overseas in less than three months in this war. But it takes years to train scientists and skilled mechanics.

So, as I sit up here, away from the confusion of Washington, where you see the trees as well as the leaves, I am convinced that we can't go backward to the type of army that bogged France down; but rather we must go forward to more education, more science, more understanding of international problems. For the first time in history we are up against the inescapable fact that we must work at peace as hard as we have worked at war.

We may not want to admit the need and benefits of progress, but if we are to save the world it has got to come.

"GREATEST FORD EVER BUILT"

Says Public From Coast to Coast!

"How Soon?" and "How Much?" Ask Throngs in Dealer Showrooms

On October 26 the new Fords for 1946 went on display in dealer showrooms the country over. In city after city, town after town, dealers reported that the crowds who came to view these fine new automobiles equaled those who greeted the introduction of the famous Ford Model "A" back in 1927—when showroom attendance passed the 10,000,000 mark.

The opening day throngs were matched by those who came Saturday and later. And their opinion has been unanimous. The words most frequently heard have been "The greatest Ford ever built." They backed up their acclaim with orders—326,840 on "V8 Day"—October 26 and Saturday, October 27.

This advertisement is published to record the deep gratification of the entire Ford organization at this splendid public reception . . . and to answer, as directly as we possibly can, the two questions most often asked:

"HOW SOON CAN I GET MY NEW FORD?" We sincerely believe the answer is: "Sooner than you think . . . " and here's why—Ford, first with assembly line production of post-war cars, first to stock dealers for a nation-wide display, is first in quantity production—1,000 units a day reached last week . . . 2,000 a day in prospect within 30 days.

"HOW MUCH WILL MY NEW FORD COST?" We think the answer to this is found in Ford's unvarying policy through more than 40 years of operation: Always the highest quality at the lowest possible cost.

To those who have not yet seen the new Fords: ALL our dealers have them on display. Please make it a point to see if you, too, don't agree that these are the "greatest Fords ever built."

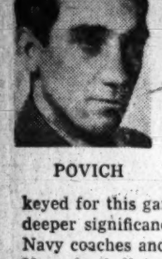
Eastern Beats Tech, 20-19; Central Wins, 6-0

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, Nov. 2.—All of a sudden there is a new respect for Navy's football team as the hour of its Notre Dame game approaches. Earlier in the week, Notre Dame was a seven-point favorite in the betting marts. This morning, those odds had dwindled to quotations that gave Notre Dame a mere one-point margin. Tonight it is even money and take your pick.



POVICH

There is all sorts of talk about the Navy team in Cleveland today, ranging from stories that the Midshipmen have taken a pledge to win this game for their coaches, to the rumors that key players have decided to take their game into their own hands. That last is absurd, but it illustrates the widespread credence given to reports that Navy players are dissatisfied with their coaches.

What is apparent is that the Middies are highly keyed for this game. The Army game isn't being regarded with any deeper significance than tomorrow's battle with Notre Dame. The Navy coaches and players are wounded by the low esteem in which Navy football is being held despite Navy's five straight victories. They want not only a victory over Notre Dame, but they're eager for a decisive one.

In fact, never have two unbeaten teams come up to an important game with such lack of acclaim as Navy and Notre Dame. The Irish have bowled over Illinois, Georgia Tech, Dartmouth, Pitt and Iowa, and have yielded only 16 points to the opposition, yet there is reluctance to recognize Notre Dame as anything resembling a powerhouse. What you hear is that Notre Dame's opposition wasn't much.

Navy hasn't yet encountered a team with a forward passer like Frank Dancewicz, and Penn's Bob Evans last week demonstrated that the Middies give ground before a smart passing attack. The Irish running game, however, should hold no particular terror for the Middies. No club has been able to gain consistently against Navy's big, rough line which tomorrow will be prodded by the desire to surpass itself. It could be a very rough game.

In all of the poor press notices Navy has been getting this season, the Middies' line has escaped criticism. In fact, Navy's press notices have probably been an injustice to the Middies' line which has outplayed all opposition and has been guilty of none of the Navy's fumbles. Both Georgia Tech and Penn were stopped in touchdown marches inside the Navy two-yard line.

The break Navy could get tomorrow would be the sudden recovery of big Bob Jenkins, the workhouse fullback who has been sidelined by injuries for more than three weeks. There is the suspicion that Jenkins may get in tomorrow's game despite the statement by Navy coaches that he is not expected to play, though he will be in uniform for the first time in nearly a month.

Coach Oscar Hagberg reiterated today that Jenkins is not counted on to figure in the Notre Dame game, but he left the door open to the possibility that he might play when he said, "If we get the ball inside Notre Dame's five and need somebody to push it over, the temptation to send Jenkins in there would be pretty strong.

Meanwhile, the man Notre Dame is tabbing in the Navy backfield is Clyde Scott, running, plunging, pass-taking halfback who is credited in many circles with being a better back than Jenkins. Scott definitely had an off-day in the Penn game, but in addition to his ground-gaining talents he is Navy's best defensive back.

Following the Penn game, the story was told that Dick Duden, Navy's captain who plays left end, assumed complete charge of the team and in defiance of the coaches called the plays that produced the two touchdowns that won the game in the last eight minutes. It was officially denied that Duden usurped any of the coaches' powers, but the story that he did persists.

We got a communication from an Annapolis cadet who insists that "full credit should go to Captain Dick. He made up both plays that scored the touchdowns. They were not in the books; he figured Penn's defense and devised the plays accordingly. This is not a fairy tale or plain scuttlebutt. It is the straight dope."

The letter was signed with the request that the writer's name be omitted. For that kind of a letter, a Midshipman could be tossed out of the Naval Academy.

. . . With Apologies

Our Fearless Expert Likes Notre Dame, Buckeyes, Duke

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Here's another edition of the weekly football forecast, submitted with apologies for that wave of upsets last week which dropped this corner's average to .776 with 152 correct predictions and 44 misses for the season:

NAVY VS. NOTRE DAME—The winner here can challenge Army for the national championship. As close as theycome, and if the snow flies as predicted it might wind up in a tie. The Middies will be pulling together after airing their internal difficulties but the Irish can pull too, and push at the same time. Notre Dame.

NORTHWESTERN VS. OHIO STATE—Both teams were in top form last week in knocking off Purdue and Minnesota. That was something new for the Wildcats this year but old stuff to the Buckeyes. Ohio State.

ST. MARY'S VS. SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA—This won't help the Trojans get back on top in the Pacific Coast Conference, but they'll be trying ot win just the same, so will the Gaels, however, and they're unbeaten. St. Mary's.

MINNESOTA VS. MICHIGAN—The team on the rebound is the team to watch in the Big Ten this year. You can forget about that Ohio State upset and keep your eye on the gophers and the little brown jub. Minnesota.

VILLANOVA VS. ARMY—The cadets will be looking ahead to next week's game with Notre Dame. Red Blaik won't even be on hand. He'll be watching the Irish and Navy at Cleveland. If he isn't worrying, why should we? Army.

DUKE VS. GEORGIA TECH—Both teams have been through some rough experiences. Might be close. Duke.

TEXAS A. AND M. VS. ARKANSAS—A tough one in that goofy Southwest Conference race where all sorts of things happen. Texas A. and M.

PITTSBURGH VS. PURDUE—Although the Panthers had nothing to do with Purdue's plunge from the unbeaten ranks, they'll catch plenty from the vengeful, rebounding boilermakers. Purdue.

CORNELL VS. COLUMBIA—May be a pitchers' battle between Dekdebrun and Rossides. Cornell couldn't beat Yale. Columbia could. Columbia.

ALABAMA VS. KENTUCKY—The first easy one for the crimson tide, now the Nation's fourth ranking team. Alabama.

MISSISSIPPI STATE VS. TULANE—The green wave is rolling, belatedly, but State is undefeated, an drested. Mississippi State.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN VS. OKLAHOMA—After two losses to Southwest Conference teams, the Big Six champs are due to win one. Oklahoma.

PRINCETON VS. PENNSYLVANIA—After what happened to the Quakers in the Navy game, the unbeaten but once-tied Tigers are in for a very busy afternoon. Pennsylvania.

WASHINGTON VS. OREGON—The Huskies already have beaten Oregon once this year. What's to keep them from repeating? Washington.

TEXAS VS. S. M. U.—The Longhorns to bounce back after their surprising loss to Rice. Texas.

WASHINGTON STATE VIS. CALIFORNIA—They're tough to pick on the Pacific Coast. Eenie, meenie . . . California.

MISSISSIPPI VS. L. S. U.—Looks like the Tigers all the way. L. S. U.

Hurrying over the remainder of the day's major games—Indiana over Cornell College, Illinois over Great Lakes, Wisconsin over Iowa, Missouri over Michigan State, Iowa State over Kansas State, Kansas over Nebraska. Temple over Lafayette, Penn State over Syracuse, Yale over Dartmouth, Brown over Coast Guard, Rochester over Nyu, Rutgers over Lehigh, Connecticut over Amherst, Georgia over Chattanooga, Tennessee over North Carolina, Auburn over Florida, Wake Forest over Presbyterian, Vanderbilt over Virginia Military, Maryland over William and Mary, Virginia over West Virginia, North Carolina State over Virginia Tech, Baylor over Southwester, Rice over Texas Tech, Colorado over New Mexico, Denver over Utah, and on Sunday Marquette over Detroit and Holy Cross over New London.

Landon Beaten By Montgomery

With Allen King spearheading the attack, Richard Montgomery High's eleven rang up a 31-0 triumph over Landon Prey yesterday at Montgomery. It was Montgomery's third victory of the year.

King scored two touchdowns, while Ray Luhn, Edward Wratten and Jack Rife scored once.

Call for Cagers

All Maryland basketball teams from the folowing communities are requested to send representatives to the Takoma Fire Department clubroom today between 5 and 7 p. m. Laurel, Hyattsville, Silver Spring, Bethesda, Congress Heights, Greenbelt, Colesville, Rockville and Mount Rainier. R. E. McDonald, district representative of the National Basketball Congress, will be there to make plans for a league.

It's All Even

Penn State's soccer team broke even in its first two starts, winning from Muhlenberg and losing to Temple.

Navy-Irish Game Heads Day's Football

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer.

Cleveland, Nov. 2.—Unbeaten Navy and unbeaten Notre Dame collide tomorrow in Cleveland's big Municipal Stadium before 82,000 spectators and top ranking in the Nation alongside of Army will be riding on the result of their battle.

The kick-off, at 2:30 p. m., will find both teams geared to a determined pitch—Navy seeking to redeem itself for its bunglesome though winning performances this season, and Notre Dame aching to atone for the humiliating 32-13 defeat by Navy last year.

In football-mad Cleveland on the eve of the game, the scalpers are asking and getting $25 for even the cheaper seats despite a city ordinance aimed at checking ticket speculating. More than a month ago, even before it was determined that both teams would come up to the game unbeaten, the big stadium's ticket supply was exhausted.

One figure on the Notre Dame squad, Quarterback Frank Dancewiscz, transcends the pregame talk. Dancewiscz's passing exploits this season in victories over Illinois, Georgia Tech, Dartmouth, Pitt and Iowa label him as the player most likely to engineer a Navy defeat.

Resurgent confidence in Navy, however, has reduced the game to an even money betting affair after Notre Dame was held a seven-point favorite earlier in the week.

Second Navy Test

For Navy, it is a second consecutive test against an unbeaten team. Last week at Philadelphia the Middies ousted Penn from the unbeaten ranks with a forward-passing attack in the final eight minutes, and tomorrow Navy is expected to counter Dancewicz's passing skill with its own aerial arm.

Bob Hoernschemeyer, former Indiana star who is now a Navy plebe, threw the winning passes against Penn, and Navy coaches confidently announce that Hoernschemeyer "has arrived" after proving a disappointment in early-season games. His teammates, however, declare that Hoernschemeyer was handicapped until last week with arm and shoulder injuries that were kept secret from the opposition.

Commanding much of the interest in tomorrow's game will be the performance of Bob Kelly, Navy right halfback, who last year was Notre Dame's big ground gainer against Navy. Thus far this season, Kelly, like other Navy backs has been hobbled by the newness of the Middies' T-Formation.

"We're due to explode any day, and tomorrow could be the day," declared a Navy coach tonight, irked by the criticism that has followed Navy's week-to-week performances.

Scott to Start

With Kelly and Hoernschmeyer in Navy's starting backfield will be hard-running Clyde Scott, who is also a defensive bulwark, and Plebe Myron Gerberg or Jim Pettit at the fullback post.

Big Bob Jenkins, who has been out of uniform for nearly a month because of injuries, will be on the Navy bench today in uniform but Navy coaches doubt that Jenkins will see action.

Navy's line, which has not yielded a touchdown this season, is credited with being a stronger unit than Notre Dame's, but the Irish are deeper in good reserves in the line. Notre Dame coaches held the score down against Iowa last week and Dartmouth three weeks ago by playing reserve teams for most of the games.

It will be the sixth meeting of Navy and Notre Dame in Cleveland where Navy hasn't beaten the Irish since 1934, when Buzz Borries threw a game-winning pass to Dusty Dornin. Notre Dame has won 14 of its 18 Navy games since the rivalry began.

Challamore Wins Feature At Pimlico

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 2.—E. C. Eastwood's Challamore, a veteran campaigner which ran one of his poor races last time out, came through with one of his better efforts today and hung half-length defeat on H. L. Straus' Quarter Moon, an odds-on favorite, in the sixth race, best offering on the Friday program. Third money went to Bobanet Stable's Trojan Fleet four lengths off the place.

A crowd of 13,000 saw Quarter Moon go to the front early, but Challamore came to the outside of the leader. The two battled along until midstretch, where Challomore went to the front and held on with courage. Jockey M. Basile rode the winner, while H. Claggett, who rode Challamore in his previous race, was on Quarter Moon.

The winner made it three victories in 12 starts this year, brought his backers an $8.30 mutuel, and was clocked in a creditable 1:11 2/5 for the six furlongs.

Wins First Start

John C. Montana's Little Sammie, making his first start of the season here, was the winner of the day's steeplechase, getting home two lengths ahead of M. A. Cushman's Dancing Archie. Six lengths farther back came Mrs. D. P. Barrett's Abidale to be third in a field of six going two miles over 15 jumps. The winner wore down Dancing Archie, the pacemaker, to win going away and paid a $5.90 mutuel while being clocked in 3.57 1/5. Abidale was the favorite and did not appear to be under a drive at any time during the running.

The stewards announced that Jockey James McGovern who rode Abidale to defeat, had been suspended for the remainder of the meeting for an "unsatisfactory ride." His case will be referred to the Maryland Racing Commission.

Marquest Wins

Mrs. G. Campbell's Marquest proved much the best in the first, leading his closest rival to the wire by six lengths. V. S.McClintock's Great Play was second and three lengths in advance of R. L. Hall's Coosa. A field of 12 competed in the test of 1 1/16 miles and the winner was clocked in 1:48.

Favorite players were still left out in the cold as I. D. Peat's Valetta H. flashed some speed and finished in fourth place. The winner paid $19.10 and was handled by Apprentice R. J. Martin.

The Greentree Stable finally ended the string of longshots when Hadrian took the second event with ease to bring his legion of backers a $5.20 mutuel. The son of Roman finished three lengths in advance of Cedar Farm's Git with George M. Cohen's Stanley third.

DeCorrevant Due to Star For Redskins

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer.

By tomorrow nightfall, Washington may be saluting a new Redskin hero. Cheers this year so far have sounded for "Slinging Sammy" Baugh, Frank Filchock, Wilbur Moore, Bob Seymour and more lately for Frank Akins and Steve Bagarus.

And now, unless all signs fail, may come Bill DeCorrevont's turn.

The former Chicago schoolboy, who once was the magnet that drew 120,000 fans into Soldier Field for a scholastic championship game and later went on to football fame at Northwestern University, may pick tomorrow as the day he earned his spurs as a pro performer, against the invading Chicago Cards.

Bill came to the Redskins late in September after discharge from the Navy. He played one play the Detroit Lions in a Baltimore exhibition and about two against the Boston Yanks in the Redskins' league opener. Against the Pittsburgh Steelers he played only a few minutes and against the Philadelphia Eagles here two weeks ago he played about three minutes.

By last week sealegs he had acquired from approximately three years in the Navy began to loosen and Chicago Bill began looking good. Last Sunday against the Giants he started to roll. He knocked off several 4 or 5-yard clips, then followed them with a nifty 11-yard gallop at a time when it came in very handy for the Redskins.

Later, he skirted inside the Giant right end for a 5-yard slash and missed scoring only by inches when he was pushed out of bounds. He slightly hurt his leg on the play and it was feared for a few moments all the month's faithful training and work had been wasted. But the injury was merely a slight twist.

All this week, DeCorrovont has been flashing his schoolboy and collegiate speed in a manner almost dazzling. So impressed is Coach Dud DeGroot he plans to give Blond Bill a real workout.

Don't be surprised if Bill doesn't come into his own.

Al DeMao, an All-American center from the 1941 Duquesne eleven, yesterday agreed to Redskin terms and will formally sign Monday. DeMao's acquisition will necessitate slashing the squad once again as it now contains 33 players, the legal limit. DeMao, by the way, left the Navy as a lieutenant (j. g.) with quite a record as captain of an LST which crossed the Atlantic alone under his command.

Navy Lists Six Events at Home

The Junior Varsity Football Team will meet the Navy Amphibious Base of Little Creek, Va., and the Plebe football squad will play the University of Scranton.

In cross country races, the Navy varsity will race the University of Virginia, and the Plebes, Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy.

The varsity soccer team will play Johns Hopkins and the Plebes Mount St. Joseph High School of Baltimore.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 2 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. Gardnar Mulloy, former nationally ranked tennis player and amateur tennis coach at the University of Miami, expects to receive his Navy discharge about December 1. Mulloy is now serving a the Little Creek, Va., amphibious training base, near Norfolk.

Cruickkshank Takes Lead in Richmond Golf

Richmond, Va., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Wee Bobby Cruickshank, veteran Richmond professional, shot a par 71 today to take the lead after 18 holes in the $10,000 Richmond Open golf tournament.

Cruickshank, hitting his shots down the middle on the tricky Hermitage Club course where accuracy counts for more than distance, carded four birdies and was the only one of the 178 entries in the record-breaking field who was able to match part figures.

Tied for second place at 72 were Ben Hogan, the Texas star, and Jimmy Hines, White Plains, N. Y., Ky Laffoon, Chicago, Ed Oliver, Wilmington, Del., and Willie Goggin, New York.

Four Are Stroke Back

Another stroke back with 73 were Johnny Bulla, Atlanta; Dutch Harrison, Chicago; Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., and Harry Todd, Dallas.

Cruickshank, playing over the familiar Hermitage course, scored his birdies on the fifth, sixth, eighth and fifteenth holes.

On the par4 fifth, a 363-yard dogleg to the left, the tiny Scot hit the green with his second shot and dropped a 15-foot putt for the birdie.

His other birdies came the same way, getting on the green in two and dropping putts.

Sam Snead 3 Over Par

Sam Snead, another favorite, went three over par and finished with a 74. Tied with him were Terl Johnson, Norristown, Pa.; Barney Clark, Shreveport, La.; Ed Fergol, Detroit; Harry Ransom, Houston; Lew Worsham, Washington, and Tony Manero, White Plains, N. Y.

The 75 group included Gene Sarazan, Frank Stranahan, Toledo amateur; Stephen Warga, Miami; Leonard Dodson, Kansas City; Art Doering, Chicago; Herman Barrow, New York, and H. Williams of Philadelphia.

Jimmy Thompson of Richmond and Denny Shute of Akron trailed with 78's.

Tomorrow the field will be cut by eliminating all players who shot more than 85 in the opening round today.

Army Is Heavily Favored to Beat Villanova Today

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 2 (INS).—Army's power-laden football team, unbeaten in its last 14 starts, today ruled a prohibitive favorite to swamp Villanova at Michie Stadium tomorrow.

The Cadets, led by their two All-America backfield greats, Glenn Davis and Felix (Doc) Blanchard, are expected to roll up a heavy score at the expense of the thrice-beaten Wildcats.

A crowd of 15,000 fans are expected to attend.

Fishburne Splits Thanksgiving Dates

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 2.—Fishburne Military School's Thanksgiving Day celebration will be spread over two dates this year—the 22d and the 29th—due to the fact that the annual football game with Augusta Military Academy had been scheduled for the latter date before November 22 was definitely proclaimed as the official Thanksgiving Day in the State of Virginia.

This year is Fishburne's turn to be host in the forty-fifth Thanksgiving gridiron contest with Augusta Military Academy. The game will be played on the Fishburne athletic field on November 29, and the annual Garnet and Gold Thanksgiving ball will be held in the gymnasium that evening.

Losers Protest Game; Western Scores, 12-7

Anacostia Upset by Vikings; Roosevelt Bows; 3500 See Eastern's Victory

In the "crucial" game of interhigh football's most exciting day of the season, Eastern's undefeated Ramblers retained their firm grip on first place by beating off a determined Tech aggregation, 20-19, before 3500 fans at Eastern Stadium.

Following the game, Tech Coach Dan Snyder announced his intention of filing formal protest with Tony Kupka, director of the interhigh series, over the negligence of the officials in ejecting Jerry Osbourne, Eastern fullback, after a urry of fisticuffs in the third peeriod. Osbourne and Trix Trittipe, Tech tackle, had been ordered off the field after the scuffle, but Snyder alleged that Osbourne remained to participate in several subsequent plays.

Meanwhile, Anacostia's Indians missed a golden opportunity to gain undisputed possession of second place when they bowed to an underdog Central eleven, 6-0, at Anacostia. It was Anacostia's first defeat of the season, and dropped the Indians into third place.

And in a game that had no important bearing on the league race, Western's "T" formation clicked for the first time this year as the Red Raiders rallied to defeat Roosevelt, 12-7, at Western.

Central High Scores In First Period

The Centralites pushed across a touchdown early in the first period and then staged a great defensive game, stopping Anacostia's strong passing 4o almost a standstill to register their first league victory in five starts.

Anacostia, which prior to the game boasted three victories and one tie, soon found it couldn't move anywhere through the big Central line, and when the Tribe took to the air, it was almost as futile. The Indians threatened only twice, the third and fourth periods, but both times the alert Central defense snatched Indian passes to take possession of the ball.

Central's touchdown came in the opening minutes of play on a sustained drive of 63 yards. The Vikings took over when Don Dinkins' kick was downed on their own 37. Pete Lerario and Gene Hammill, a combination Anacostia simply couldn't stop, alternated at running all the way down to the Anacostia 1-foot line, where Hammill ripped through center for the score. Steve Manos' attempted kick for the point was blocked.

Ronnie Kent, halfback; End Gene Schroeder, Don Dinkins, fullback, and Quarterback Willie Umholtz turned in outstanding performances for the Indians. Central's rugged little end, Dick Scribner, was a menace to the Indians all day, stopping end sweeps and nabbing Lerario aerials.

West'n Overcomes 7-0 Rider Lead

Western's Red Raiders, who have more or less been shoved around in the interhigh series this year, after finishing second to Eastern last season, was forced to overcome a 7-0 Roosevelt lead, and the Raiders did just that, scoring touchdowns in the second and last periods to clinch their first victory.

For a while it appeared the Rough Riders would win their first 45 game. Striking by air, the Riders moved to Western's 45, where Lou Limber, all-high center last year who has been moved back to the fullback slot, whipped a 45-yard touchdown pass to Lehr Wymann. Bobby Cohen kicked the point.

The Westerners came back in the second period to register a touchdown. Don Lichty, Railer halfback, set up the score when he gathered in A Dugoff's punt in midfield and raced all the way to the 17 before being stopped. Lichty then took the ball to the 13, where he promptly rifled a shot to Norman Wacker in the end zone.

The clincher came early in the fourth period, an dit was Lichty again doing the damage. The fleet halfback broke loose for 30 yards for the final score. The game ended with Roosevelt on the march on Western's 8-yard line.

Lane High Team Beats Fairfax, 38-0

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 2.—Lane High's eleven won from Fairfax High here today, 38 to 0, to register its fifth victory of the season. The visiting team, which came here with four victories to its credit, made a disappointing showing, registering but three first downs.

Lane's eleven, showing its best form of the year, scored in every quarter and had a seventh touchdown called back because the backfield was in motion. Spectacular runs were made by Barnett and Chisholm. In the third quarter Chisholm raced 70 yards to score.

Cage Officials Meet

The District of Columbia Basketball Officials Association will hold a meeting Tuesday at 8 p. m. at the Recreation Department, Dallas Shirley, secretary-treasurer, announced yesterday.

Rambler Rally Beats Trainers

In stretching their interhigh winning streak over a two-year period to 16, the Ramblers got off on the right foot the first time they got possession of the ball, but even after rolling up a 14-0 lead, could not coast in. In fact, with seven minutes left to play, the defending champs found themselves on the short end of a 14-19 score.

After Eastern's Bobby Lyles had returned the opening kickoff from the 20 to the 38, the Ramblers, sparked by Jack Robb, who played an important role in all of his team's scores, and diminutive Sonny Settle, pounded through the Tech forward wall to the Trainer 19 on nine plays. Then Bobb raced into the end zone on a reverse, carrying three Trainers on his back. Jerry Osbourne converted.

After a Tech drive had fizzled on the Rambler one early in the second quarter, Eastern again went on the march, as a result of Osbourne's punt which was accidentally touched by Willie Poms, Tech quarterback, and recovered by Bobb on the Trainer 47. Three plays brought the ball to the Tech 24, where Bobb fired a touchdown pass to Tom Foley. Osbourne again converted.

The Trainers bounced back with seconds remaining in the first half when passes from Andy Davis to Don Humphrey and Johnny Ferguson to Ray Hollidge moved the ball 49 yards to the Eastern's 14, where Davis went off tackle to the 9, and then passed to Cecil Gray in the end zone. The Trainers failed to convert on a pass play.

Tech moved to within striking distance of the Ramblers on the second play of the third quarter when Davis found an opening off tackle and after shaking off at least six tacklers, galloped 63 yards to score.

Following an exchange of punts, Davis took command of the Tech offense, and once more paced a scoring drive that carried 51-yards to the Eastern one, where Gray, who had been declared scholastically eligible just before game-time, knifed through center to put the Trainers ahead, 18-14. Davis added the extra point on an end run, which saw fists fly, and resulted in the ejection of Eastern's fullback, Jerry Osbourne, and negliTech's Trix, Trittipoe.

It was the referee's alleged negligence in ordering Osbourne off the field that caused Tech Coach Dan Snyder to file protest on the game. According to Snyder, Osbourne remained on the field long enough to participate in several plays after his ejection.

The Ramblers cashed in on the Trainers questionable fourth quarter strategy of passing, when Sonny Settle intercepted a Gray aerial on the Tech 46, and raced to the 14 where Davis brought him down from behind. Two plays later, Eastern aplied the clincher on Settle's 16-yard pass to Bobb in the end zone.

Virginia Takes Hot Streak In W.Va. Game

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—The University of Virginia football team, undefeated in 11 consecutive games, left this morning for Charleston, W. Va., where tomorrow they meet the West Virginia Mountaineers.

The Cavaliers will enter the game with several changes in the line, due to the commissioning of co-Captain Henry Walker, an end, but with its impressive backfield intact.

Since the Virginians defeated West Virginia, 24-6, last fall in Charleston they have not been defeated in 11 games, their otherwise spotless record, however, being marred by a 13-13 tie with North Carolina Pre-Flight, and a 6-6 deadlock with Yale.

In practice yesterday, Coach Frank Murray ran as a unit the same four backs who teamed to win from Virginia Military Institute and Virginia Tech. The quartet comprises Charlie Ellis, quarterback; Johnny Duda and Ray Brown, halfbacks, and Jay Kennard, fullback.

Terps, W. & M. Clash Today at College Park

By Newton Bowers
Post Staff Writer.

Hostile Indians from William and Mary College, who strike with footballs instead of warclubs but with much the same effects, will invade College Park today for a Southern Conference pow-wow with University of Maryland in Byrd Stadium at 2 p. m.

Shades of 40 years ago will be recalled when the two teams line up for the opening kickoff, the last Maryland-William and Mary game being held in 1905. With a chap named "Curly" Byrd sparking the attack, Maryland won that game, 17-0. That chap named "Curly," incidentally, now is Dr. H. C. Byrd, Maryland president, who will be plugging hard as ever for the Terps to come through.

HANK BOUK

Today, the second strongest grid force in the Southern Conference will be decided. With Duke perched atop the heap, undefeated in loop play, and Maryland and William and Mary close behind, each with one setback, the Blue Devils' No. 1 challenger hinges on the Indian-Terp outcome. It will be the fourth conference test for the Indians and the third for the Terps.

Three Victories

William and Mary invades College Park with victories over Virginia Tech, holder of an upset over Maryland, Virginia Military Institute and Catawba College, and defeats from Tennessee and N. C. State. The Terps have triumphed over Guilford College, Richmond, Merchant Marine, tied West Virginia and lost to VPI.

One of the largest throngs of the season is expected to be present when the Terps and Indians open hostilities and, as in the war, it will be a question of "air supremacy." Both the Terrapins and Indians have been hard at work in preparing their pass offenses and defenses this week so if the sky over Byrd Stadium should resemble an "armada" today, it'll be only football heading for hopeful receivers.

William and Mary embarked from Williamsburg early this morning and will hold a short workout today in Byrd Stadium. Minus the customary pads, Coach R. N. (Rube) McCray will send his Tribe through several offensive plays and sharpen up the Indians' pass defense.

Terps Active

Meanwhile, there was no letup on Maryland's practice menu yesterday in College Park as Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant and his Terps dug down in a limbering-up session. "William and Mary has a big club," Bryant remarked after the drills, "and we'll have a tough time penetrating its defense. I'm going to keep my fingers crossed and hope for the best."

Bill (Red) Poling, flashily triple-threat halfback; Hammerin' Hank Bonk, plunging fullback, who is the leading scorer in Maryland with 37 points; Sam Behr, fleet halfback, and Quarterback Vic Turyn, are expected to make up the Maryland backfield. The Terps' potent little forward wall will again be bolstered by such standouts as Rockin' Richard Johnston and Emile Fritz, contenders for All-Conference guard berths; Center Jarrin' John Schreiner-goat, Tackles Joe Drach and Red (Long-Legs) Kinney, and Flankmen Bob Crossland and Bill Morter.

Bainbridge Gets Warning Of Rocket Stars

Bainbridge, Md., Nov. 2.—An All-American cager, Corpl. Ed Ehlers, and a mercury-footed back, Sergt. Roger Smith, head the Air Transport Command Rockets who'll meet the Bainbridge Commodores here Sunday.

Some 20,000 Washington grid fans saw an exhibition by Ehlers and Smith last Sunday as the ATC walloped the Cherry Point Marines, 27-0, in the Capital.

Ehlers, a 205-pound bull-shouldered youngster, didn't play much football at Purdue where he won cage honors and it wasn't until he donned his Army uniform that he started going places in a gridiron way. In early season he was strictly a power fullback and it wasn't until last week against the Marines that he uncovered unsuspected prowess as a passer.

His tosses paid off in one touchdown and set the stage for another. Smith is the most improved back on the Rocket squad. A product of Texas Tech, he is one of the leading ATC ground gainers. In the last two games he has rambled for three touchdowns, going 55 yards for a score against the First Air Force two weeks ago and rambling into paydirst twice against the Marines on short off-tackle cutbacks.

These two Rocket offensive threats operate behind a forward wall which has been dubbed by conference rivals as the most feared line in the AAF Conference.

From end to end the Rockets are two deep in big, husky former pro and former collegiate stars such as Preston Flanagan from Texas and Bob Davis, Penn State, at ends; Frank Wydo, Dequesne and Stan Mauldin, Texas, tackles; George Cheroke, Ohio State and Rafe Nabors, Detroit Lions, guards and Charlie Block, Tulane, center.

Making it double touch for the Navy Sunday, is the fact that every starter on the ATC line, has a replacement just as big and as rugged as he is.

Hearing Today On Pay Raise For U.S. Aides

From Yesterday's Late Editions

The Truman Administration's attitude toward a pay raise for Government workers will be disclosed at hearings beginning on Capitol Hill today. There are strong indications that it will be favorable.

President Truman has urged private industry to grant wage increases to its workers. It is pointed out, therefore, that if he is to be consistent, the Chief Executive would hardly deny increases to Government workers, who also have been hit by loss of overtime and the rise in the cost of living.

The Administration's position will be disclosed at hearings on the Downey bill which would authorize a 20 per cent increase for Government workers, about a quarter of a million of whom are located in the Washington area.

The hearings will start at 10 o'clock this morning in Room 135 of the Senate Office Building, and the first witness will be Civil Service Commissioner Arthur Flemming.

Even-Stephen

Penn State and Temple will be striving to break a 3-3 deadlock when they meet on the gridiron for the seventh time November 10.

Ex-GI's Like Action

Coach Bob Higgins says former GI's on the Penn State football squad "just clamor for action. They love combat."

Doctors Sought For Veterans' Medical Tests

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Members of the District Medical Society will be asked to volunteer their services on a fee basis to take care of a backlog of 1000 local veterans awaiting physical examinations in connection with pension claims.

Dr. W. Cabell Moore, chairman of the society's committee on industrial medicine, and Theodore Wiprud, society secretary, will meet with Maj. Spencer V. Meade, chief medical officer of the Veterans' Administration, Monday, to map an immediate workable plan of hours and compensation.

Specialists most needed by the Veterans' Administration are psychiatrists, ear, eye, nose and throat men, surgeons, eye doctors and specialists in internal medicine and orthopedic surgery. They will be paid by the VA at fees comparable to those paid in workmen's compensation cases.

Woodward Tops Sherwood, 18 to 12

Woodward Prep's gridders registered a 18-12 victory over Sherwood High yesterday at Sandy Springs.

Woodward scored touchdowns in the first three periods, while Sherwood pushed across 6-pointers in the third and fourth stanzas. Dave Jones passed to Dave Foster 30 yards for Woodward's opening score.

The Prepmen marched 70 yards for their second touchdown, climaxed by a 2-yard line buck by Al Martin. Sherwood's Crosby passed over both touchdowns, pitching bull's eyes to Conn and Hambaugh. Woodward scored its final touchdown when Don Purdy, former Anacostia star, hit the end zone from the 2.

'Old Guards' Are Jubilant On Enfranchisement Day

By Genevieve Reynolds

Old guard feminists who fought for woman's suffrage and got slammed into jail for their efforts were in a jubilant mood yesterday as they celebrated "Woman's Enfranchisement Day" as officially proclaimed by President Harry S. Truman.

Miss Pollitzer

President Truman set aside November 2, 1945, to mark the anniversary of the day when in 1920 women throughout the United States first voted in a presidential election, and called upon the people of this country to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies. This is the first time in the history of the country that such a day and occasion has been designated by a Chief Executive.

Greatest hubbub of excitement and exaltation occurred among members of the National Woman's Party, who reputedly persuaded President Truman to issue the Enfranchisement Day proclamation. Historic old Alva Belmont House, 144 B st. ne.—headquarters for the NWP—echoed with rejoicing as representatives from 32 national women's organizations assembled there prior to visiting Capitol Hill.

Handshaking Order of Day

Delegates spent the day handshaking in thanks to Representatives and Senators who have and are supporting the pending equal rights amendment and lent their influence to obtain the "Woman's Enfranchisement Day proclamation."

Mrs. Anita Pollitzer, newly elected chairman of the National Woman's Party and chairman of the party's New York City committee, led the delegation.

Among congressional members receiving appreciation scrolls were Senator Kenneth McKellar, who long has supported the woman's movement and helped obtain Tennessee's ratification of the nineteenth amendment in 1920 enabling women to vote; Senator Alben Barkely, majority leader of the Senate; Senator Arthur Capper, life-long friend of the woman's movement; Representative Clarence F. Lea, Representative Zeboulon Weaver, Representative John M. Robinson, Representative Louis Ludlow, Representative Alger Goodwin.

Representatives Make Rounds

Women's organizational representatives making the rounds on the Hill were Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, Mrs. Brice Clagett and Mrs. Leslie Wright, General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Gertrude Parks, president, D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Marguerite Rawalt, president, D. C. Business and Professional Women's Clubs, who represented the national BPWC as well; Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, long time friend of the late Susan B. Anthony, headed a delegation from the National Association of Colored Women, of which she was once president.

Still others were Miss Agnes Wynn, National Education Association; Dean Helen B. Arthur, dean of Washington College of Law and president of the National Association of Women Lawyers; Mrs. Izetta Jewell Miller represented the Democratic women who had worked for suffrage; Miss Katherine Norris, chairman, joint legislative committee for equal rights, and Miss Edith Good represented the National Woman's Party.

League Too Busy to Celebrate

A check at national headquarters, National League of Women Voters, yesterday here found officers and members undisturbed by the enfranchisement day proclamation. Miss Anna Lord Strauss, president, NLWV, was in Quebec attending the Conference of Food and Agriculture on United Nations Organizations and could not be reached.

However, Mrs. Harold Stone, director, NLWV, summed up the league's reaction to the official proclamation. "I can't see that it is of any particular importance except that it will encourage the women of Italy, France and Japan and other countries, where they are casting their first votes," she declared. "Certainly, it will mean that these voters will look to us for political experience and guidance.

"We're much too busy working on the atomic bomb and its implications to stop to celebrate," she explained. "The league isn't much on celebrations anyway. It feels that all its energy should go into work for pressing needs now." Of course, we are glad of the benefits of suffrage," she added.

Then Mrs. Stone went on to point out many gains that had been obtained since women were given the ballot. She recalled that the National League of Women Voters has been instrumental in abolishing the lame duck session of Congress, had helped get passage of the Sheppard-Towner Act that implemented the Children's Bureau and its subsequent child welfare and protective legislation.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

'Where Do We Eat?'

I'M TIRED of hearing about food—food for us, I mean. I don't wan't to hear any more arguments about which quaint little place in the country we can drive to for luncheon—now that there's plenty of gasoline. I'm not interested in Ye Olde Farmhouse where they have the darling red and white checked table cloths and let you help yourself to all the fried chicken you want—(though of course, my dear, lots of people are tired of fried chicken because they had so much during the war), or in Ye Olde Oyster Cove down on the bay where you can get those wonderful broiled lobsters. Nor am I concerned that it's just like the old days now that you can take your guests to the Hotel Swank and be moderately sure of ordering a sirloin steak for them—even though steaks have been terribly slow in coming back on the market, don't you think?

I am concerned though over the fact that Americans are considered such babies or such weaklings that they can't be asked to continue rationing so that some of Europe's starving millions can be saved from disease, death and anarchy. I am concerned that, with Americans now consuming meat at a level 12 per cent above what they did in prewar years, the Government seems to intend to let meat consumption rise further—apparently feeling that the people can't hold off any longer from their steaks and chops.

I DON'T WANT to hear any more about all those little eating places with atmosphere to which everyone seems to be rushing—the Old Witch House where they serve the turtle soup in antique tureens . . . the Magnolia Arbor where you can get a Virginia, or a Missouri, or a Kentucky or almost any other kind of a State cured ham with hot biscuits and apple pie . . . or Steve's Barbecue, which is really all right inside, and where you can get his famous barbecued sandwich, also hamburgers of real tenderloin . . . or the Home on the Range where they're serving their individual steak pies again . . . or Miss Abby's Blue Lantern where you can get a turkey dinner with wild rice and popovers, or any of the other places of which well nourished people talk . . . and talk . . . and talk.

I do want to hear why it is that while we have butter for our hot cakes, UNRRA has only 60 per cent of its needed fats in sight, also why it is that of the 1,600,000 tons of sugar discovered by the Dutch in Java ports, the United States will receive at least 700,000 tons (while we are already getting 72 pounds a year per capita), instead of its being spread among the exhausted and energy-starved people of Europe who—when they get it—receive a little more than 10 pounds a year. I especially would like to hear why it is in view of General Eisenhower's warning, "without food there will be no peace," our Congress has been so slow in coming across with the 550 million dollars we pledged in February, 1944, for relief in Europe, thus causing 180 million Europeans on the verge of starvation to "wait a little longer"—perhaps too long—for the bread they need so desperately.

I'M THROUGH listening to any further talk of how hard it is to entertain at a luncheon because of the downtown crowds, and how you have to go at 11 o'clock to get a table in any of the better tearooms . . . of how somebody's club has upped its weekly luncheon price to two, three or five dollars because the hotels have you at their mercy and the club members wouldn't dream of taking their guests to any but the "best" places . . . of how hostesses now get out their best silver and china because there's enough variety of food to serve a five course formal dinner . . . of how housewives still have to serve angel food instead of devils food cake when they entertain their club or their set because of the sugar and chocolate shortage . . . of how this or that delicacy is back on the market or will be before long and how entertaining is picking up since meals can be made so much "more interesting."

I would be interested in hearing more talk of food for other people, of how, for example, the Greeks' 900-calorie menu of soup, black bread and coffee could be made more "interesting"; of how protein foods could be gotten to populations weakened by five years of hunger and misery; of how more Americans might follow the example of the 48 national organizations who have volunteered to President Truman to continue rationing in the interest of relief for those more greatly in need, and also that of those Britons who are signing a monstrous petition offering to have their own skimpy rations cut to help feed a starving and unstable Europe; of how we might cease our haggling threats of withholding food from the hungry for political reasons. I would above all be interested in hearing less talk about WHERE we Americans are going to eat and more about WHEN our suffering neighbors are going to be fed.

Colemans Return From Honeymoon In Miami Beach

Milton N. Coleman and his bride have just returned from a three-week honeymoon in Miami, Fla.

Their wedding took place recently in the Beth Sholom Synagogue, decorated with ferns and white flowers. Rabbi Henry Segal read the vows for the double-ring candlelight ceremony.

White orchids were draped over the Bible carried by the bride, the former Miss Irene Sollars, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sollars, whose low-waisted gown was fashioned of white satin with full-length train. A pearl crown adorned her head and held her long veil of illusion.

Mrs. Irving Mendelson was the matron of honor in powder blue jersey and pink roses. Maid of honor was Miss Shirley Cohen in pale yellow net and headpiece and bouquet of purple flowers.

Brocaded fitted bodices with full net skirts of pink and blue costumed the six bridesmaids attending the bride. They were the Misses Elaine Berkowitz, Ruth Bortnick, Mildred Mincosky, Lillian Sherman, Frances Ugel and Mrs. Melvin Katz, Baltimore, Md. Their bouquets were of pink roses and blue delphinium. Miss Ruth Lynn Miller, flower girl, preceded the bride in chartreuse, net carrying a basket of rose petals. Bernard Helman served as ring bearer.

Best man was Julius Sherman. The bridegroom was also attended by his uncle, Henry Coleman.

Three Bond Premieres Set and Ready to Go; Notes of the Theater

AS IF TO PROVE that they meant what they said when announcement was made of complete organization and well-rounded plans for the furtherance of the Victory Loan bond campaign, the War Activities Committee of D. C., with the unanimous backing of all Washington theaters and showmen now comes up with the definite word that the first three Bond Premieres are set and ready to go.

Anton Walbrook

The first of these events is scheduled for the Little Theater on Tuesday, November 13, at 8:30 p. m., when the screen attraction will be "The Adventures of Col. Blimp," the widely celebrated British production in color, in which the principal roles are played by Anton Walbrook and Roger Livesey, both admirable actors. This showing will be in the nature of a patriotic preview, preliminary to the regular run of the picture at the Little beginning the following morning.

On Thursday night, November 15, in Constitution Hall, the National Symphony Orchestra, under the conductorship of Dr. Hans Kindler, will give a Bond Concert, with John Charles Thomas, internationally famous baritone, as guest artist.

At RKO-Keith's Theater, on Tuesday night, November 20, "The Spanish Main," RKO-Radio Technicolor production, costarring Paul Henreid and Maureen O'Hara, will be the screen feature dedicated to the sale of Victory bonds. This performance also is set down for 8:30 p. m.

The numerous other bond premieres of identical nature, but not, of course identical bills, will be announced in due course.

The method of procedure in the above instances, as well as in all the others to follow, will be the same as pursued in the seven previous bond drives. Victory bonds will be on sale at every motion picture theater in the District of Columbia. Purchasers of bonds in any denomination from $25 up will be given free tickets to the bond premiere for which the given bond is bought. Sales will be limited to the seating capacity of the theater in which the premiere is held, and the house on each occasion will be divided into sections corresponding to the face value of bonds held by the patrons. The higher denominations, needless to say, will command the better seat locations. Now is the time to buy.

While the name of the theater is sticking in your mind, now also might be as good a time as any to make known that "This Love of Ours," starring Merle Oberon, with Claude Rains and Charles Korvin, will inaugurate its first Washington engagement at RKO-Keith's Theater on next Tuesday, November 6, instead of the latterly habitual Wednesday. Based on a play by Luigi Pirandello, this Universal release is reputedly one of high emotional content with many elements of powerful audience appeal. It was directed by William Dieterle, who has surrounded his stars with a notable cast, including Ralph Morgan, Ann Codee, Fritz Leiber, Harry Devenport, Jess Barker, Barbara Bates and Andre Charlot.

Concerning Whodunit

The anxiety expressed in some quarters as to the source of the music and lyrics that comprise so important a factor in the Shubert's new "Passing Show," coming to the National for a single week, beginning Monday night, November 12, now may be allayed by the thickly peopled revelation that Ross Thomas, Will Morrissey, Eugene Burton and Dana Slawson thought up the lyrics, and Irving Actman, Mr. Morrissey and Mr. Burton contrived the tunes.

They must have been a busy crew, judging from the considerable plentitude of the musical numbers they have supplied the frolic starring Willie Howard, Sue Ryan and Bobby Morris.

When you scan your program, you will find listed such song titles as "Passing Show," "Bobby Sox Convention," "How Long Will It Be?," "The Avenue of the Americas," "The Boy From Oklahoma Meets the Girl From Carousel," "Then There Is Romance," "Dance With Me," "Sky Hook," "Along the South American Coast Line," "Could You Use a Friend," "If You Were There," "How It Feels to Be Rich"—well, how does it?—"Back in the Kitchen Again," "Living a Brand New Day," "Come Over and Dance," "It's April Again, Mr. Coward" and "You're My Kind of An Ugly"—and let's not get personal about it!

There are almost as many comedy sketches as songs listed, too.

Russell Mack has staged the whole thing, with dances arranged by Carl Randall; ballets by Mme. Kamarova. Watson Barratt did the settings, Mme. Veronica the costumes and Alfred Evans conducts.

Anything else?

Tonight at 11:45 by the clock, the Little Theater will put on a special performance of "Love on the Dole," a superbly executed British film play, sponsored by Local 27 of the United Office and Professional Workers of America (CIO). If yours aren't already in your pocket, tickets may be obtained in Room 32, 1212 18th st. nw., or, if there are any left, at the box office of the Little at time of the performance.

Now that war's end has eased building restrictions, priorities and the like, new neighborhood theaters are springing up like mushrooms all over the fringes of the Capital. With the Naylor Theater added to the Kogod and Burka chain with a gala Thursday night inaugural, Lloyd J. Wineland, president of the Fairlawn Amusement Co., comes forward with the announcement that on Monday night, November 5, his company will be launching its new Atlantic Theater, at Atlantic and South Capitol sts. sw. Designed by John and Drew Eberson and erected by the Mohler Construction Co., this new residential house embodies the latest advances in architectural and construction techniques—spacious lounges, handsome murals, Kroehler-Push Back seats, latest development in patron comfort, and other innovations. Already operating the Fairlawn, Congress and Highland theaters in Southeast Washington, the company has its new Anacostia Theater in course of construction at Minnesota ave., and Good Hope rd. se. Don't be surprised if at least three or four other neighborhood houses pop out at you under various managements these next few months.

What-Month-Is-It Note

There were also a lot of dandelions in bloom yesterday when we went out to pick the roses!

Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 2—Capt. Krug the other night stated that he still hasn't made up his mind about the future—whether he'll accept the $75,000-a-year post offered him in Hollywood. "I've devoted 15 years to working in basic industry," said Krug, "and I don't know whether I should try a different, strange field." . . . Krug will address the remaining workers at the War Production Board, before he retires on Saturday. "It's just like school graduation," he said, "only it seemed like we'd been at it for 15 years, instead of four." . . . Sean O'Casey has written two new plays. . . . Governor Dewey held a meeting last week to set up a New York State radio section.

Kay Kyser

Kay Kyser, whose income has been near the half-million mark for the past few years, attended the Toscanini concert on Sunday. After the concert he discussed it with John Royal, MNC's television boss, who asked the bandleader: "Well, what did you think of Maestro Toscanini?" . . . Kyser replied: "If he could fake, I could use him."

Happy Chandler told some Senate colleagues, just before he resigned, that he had been a candidate for and was elected to 14 offices. "There was only one more elective office to get to," said Chandler, "and I figured I couldn't get around to that for a while." . . . The War Writers Board expects to continue as a group, giving its talent and support to worthwhile campaigns . . . Col. John Gilchrist and Norbert Bodgan, the financial experts at SHAEF, will leave for Tokyo to settle the foreign exchange and money difficulties . . . Arthur Koestler, the novelist and playwright, expects to apply for Palestinian citizenship.

The resignation of Senator Chandler of Kentucky, and the possibility that Governor Willis of Kentucky may resign to take Chandler's seat in the Senate, started a Washington rumor that Paul Porter, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, would return to his native Kentucky and become a candidate for one of the vacancies . . . "Do you plan to run for Governor or Senator?" Porter was asked. He replied: "I've been rumored taking so many jobs that I feel the way Senator Jim Watson did. After Watson retired, he said he had been rumored for every job except two—(1) piano player in a bordello and (2) keeper of the pearly gates. Watson said 'I'm too old for the former and too profane for the latter.'"

Jan Clayton, now playing the leading role in "Carousel," is slated to play the leading role in the revival of "Show Boat." . . . The American Broadcasting Co. is negotiating for the services of Dick Watts, one of the ablest of America's drama critics. If Watts agrees to take the job, he'll review the new plays and movies over WJZ . . . Frank Sinatra will receive the 1945 American Unity Award at Carnegie Hall November 17, because of his picture, "The House I Live In," and his lectures on tolerance to school children throughout the Nation.

A foreign diplomat sold the building in which he and his staff worked, because he knew that his government was about to fall and that its successor would be recognized by the Allied Nations. While he still was the duly accredited representative, he sold the building to a friend . . . His government, as he expected, fell and recognition was given to its successor. Then the enriched diplomat was reminded, "and your government has requested that you be returned" . . . He quickly canceled the realty transaction with his friend, and delivered the deed to his successor, who then assured him: "Our government says you need not return."
